Curriculum Changes

Department of English

Change in Honors Program FROM: pp. 108-109

Honors in English

Students proposing to enter Honors English should take the same lower division English courses as English Majors. On their completion, they should apply for admission to the Honors English program. A Grade Point Average of 3.0 or higher in all English courses taken at Simon Fraser University is required for acceptance and continuance in the program but does not in itself guarantee either.

Normally, a student in Honors English is required to obtain 52 credit hours in upper division English courses, one of which must come from within the series ENGL 300 to 308; one must come from within the series ENGL 310 to 316; three must be ENGL 494, 495, and 496; and the remainder may come from anywhere within the series ENGL 300 to 378 and ENGL 441 to 446. ENGL 494, 495, and 496 must be taken in that order; the remainder may be taken in any order. Exceptionally, and only with the permission of the Department, other English courses of equivalent content may be substituted for either or both of those required in the series 300 to 308 and 310 to 316. With the permission of the Department, up to 8 credit hours derived from courses on literature given by the Department of Languages, Literatures and Linguistics or other Departments may be substituted for up to 8 hours in upper division English courses. No courses from other departments may be substituted for the Honors courses, ENGL 494, 495, and 496. A grade of B or higher must be achieved in the Honors Graduating Essay (ENGL 496-4) in which the program culminates.

FACULTY OF ARTS

TO:

Honors in English

This program is intended for the student who has a special interest in English Literature, and wishes to pursue his or her studies beyond the course-work required for the major. The program will provide experience in three areas: a core of essential knowledge of criticism provided by ENGL 364 (History and Principles of Literary Criticism), discussion of selected topics in two honors seminars, and, with the honors essay, independent writing and research on a topic of the student's choice.

Students proposing to enter Honors English should take the same lower division English courses as English Majors. On their completion, they should apply for admission to the Honors English program. A Grade Point Average of 3.0 or higher in all English courses taken at Simon Fraser University is required for acceptance and continuance in the program but does not in itself guarantee either.

Normally, a student in Honors English is required to obtain 52 credit hours in upper division English courses. One of these courses must come from within the series ENGL 300 to 308; one must come from within the series ENGL 310 to 316; four of these courses must be ENGL 364 (History and Principles of Literary Criticism), ENGL 491 (Honors Seminar A), English 492 (Honors Seminar B), ENGL 496 (supervised writing of the honors essay); and the remainder may come from anywhere within the series ENGL 300 to 378 and ENGL 441 to 446. ENGL 494, 495, and 496 must be taken in that order; the remainder may be taken in any order. Exceptionally, and only with the permission of the Department, other English courses of equivalent content may be substituted for either or both of those required in the series 300 to 308 and 310 to 316. With the permission of the Department, up to 8 credit hours derived from courses on literature given by the Department of Languages, Literatures and Linguistics or other Departments may be substituted for up to 8 hours in upper division English courses. No courses from other departments may be substituted for the Honors courses, ENGL 491, 492, and 496. A grade of B or higher must be achieved in the Honors Graduating Essay (ENGL 496-4) in which the program culminates.

ADD: ENGL 491-2 Honors Seminar A

Reading and discussion related to a literary topic.
Topics will vary from semester to semester.

Pre-requisite: This seminar will be open to students who have been accepted in the honors program. The student must complete this seminar before taking ENGL 496-4.

ADD: ENGL 492-2 Honors Seminar B

Reading and discussion related to a literary topic.
Topics will vary from semester to semester.

Pre-requisite: This seminar will be open to students who have been accepted in the honors program. The student must complete this seminar before taking ENGL 496-4.

RATIONALE:

In our present honors program English 494 and 495 are Directed Readings courses devoted entirely to preparation for writing the honors essay. While some excellent essays have been produced under this program, the department has found disadvantages in the program's exclusive concentration on the honors essay: the honors students become isolated from each other in their individual projects, the essay tends to become too large a project, sometimes growing into a small MA thesis, and the knowledge acquired from completing the program may be too specialized.

The proposed program will limit the length of the essay, and insure that the honors students will engage in study and discussion in several areas before writing the essay. English 364 will provide a common background in the history of criticism, while the honors seminars will focus on specific areas of literary interpretation.

One two-hour honors seminar will be offered each semester. It will be part of the formal workload of the instructor. The subject of the seminar will be chosen by the person teaching it. This subject should be limited enough to provide a specific focus for the semester's discussion, but also should be relevant to major issues of literary interpretation and critical approach. The department's Undergraduate Curriculum Committee will be responsible for seeing that the topics vary from semester to semester. Honors students will take two of these seminars. The seminars are separate from the honors essay; what is studied in the seminars need not be incorporated into the essay.

The main goals of the honors seminars will be to provide a broad range of literary knowledge by encouraging students to study areas outside, as well as within, their area of expertise, and to provide an opportunity for honors students to share and further their interests through discussion and oral presentations, thus adding some conviviality to the program.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

Changes in course title for English 318 and 320. Calendar, pages 111-112.

FROM:

- ENGL 318 Dryden, Pope, Swift
ENGL 320 Samuel Johnson and his Contemporaries

TO:

- ENGL 318 Major Authors of the Restoration and Eighteenth Century: Dryden, Swift, Pope, Johnson, Blake
ENGL 320 Topics in Literature and Culture in the Restoration and Eighteenth Century

(Note on 318--the general description of upper division English courses states: "Where the course title is a series of authors, at least two of them will be given substantial attention.")

RATIONALE:

The present definitions of 318 and 320 limit the content of the courses unnecessarily because they are too narrowly focussed and demand a chronological division of the period. In particular, the definition of 320 limits freedom to deal with the later eighteenth century. Both of the proposed definitions give the instructor freedom of choice over the whole period, including the beginnings of the Romantic Movement. 318 would consist of two or more of the named figures, possibly in combination with others, while 320 would be organized around a central theme, such as a genre or a subject from social or intellectual history.

This recommendation is the result of discussion with the four faculty who usually teach these courses--Chin Banerjee, Temple Maynard, Ann Messenger, and Kris Paulson. They initiated the suggestion for this change, and made the final choice among alternatives suggested by the committee. The recommendation was ratified unanimously at a meeting of the English Department on May 20th.
