Special Topics: Developing Strategies for "Dropout" Prevention: Social and Educational Considerations
(T2.00)
(Cat #58799)

Summer Session, 1993
(July 19-28)
Monday through Wednesday
8:30 a.m. - 12:20 p.m.
Location: Victoria

Instructor: G. Fraser

PREREQUISITE: EDUC 401/402 and certified practising teacher. Students may take no more than three Tri-University courses toward a degree or diploma.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed to provide participants with an overview of the "dropout" problem through engagement in critical examination of current research of major issues, including characteristics of "dropouts" and students at risk of dropping out, and of prevention/intervention approaches. The course is also designed to help participants develop plans for local stay-in-school initiatives.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- To provide participants with a basic understanding of the "dropout" issue.
- To conduct critical analyses of research that deals with definitions, broad intervention/prevention approaches and specific ingredients of stay-in-school initiatives.
- To develop plans and approaches for implementation of stay-in-school initiatives at the local level.

Through a review of literature, participants will familiarize themselves with psychological and sociological theories about sources of the dropout problem. Using one of these theories, they will write an essay to critically evaluate a provincial stay-in-school initiative. In small groups, participants will design a theoretically sound stay-in-school initiative and will present their design to the whole class. They will also be expected to write a brief paper of their own describing this initiative.

Pre-course reading assignments are intended to help participants build understandings about individuals affected by the dropout problem as well as local resources available to them in combatting the problem. A dialectical notebook, to be kept throughout the course, will afford participants the opportunity to reflect on their learnings as well as whatever personal involvement they may have with the issue of dropping out.
