

SUMMER TERM 2010 COURSE OUTLINE
EDUC 412W-4 (EDUCATION)
DESIGN FOR LEARNING: SECONDARY LANGUAGE ARTS
C100

This is an instructional course organized for self-study through distance education. It is designed for secondary teachers of English who teach language arts. The job of this course is to improve your chances for having an educated imagination and passing this gift onto your students.

To help you in that process, you are asked to do a lot of reading, writing and thinking in a very structured and interactive setting using electronic conferencing.

Three basic components include:

(1) EVERY MAN'S WORDS which focuses on the study of the short story. In this section, you will educate your imagination by examining short stories which are of particular appeal to secondary students today.

(2) YOUR WORDS which focuses on the teacher as writer and teacher of writing. In this section, you will develop your imagination using the writing skills, attitudes and processes of professional writers.

(3) CLASSICAL WORDS which focuses on the study of Shakespeare. You will learn ways to bring Shakespeare to the classroom in ways that are inventive and student-centered.

REQUISITE(S): EDUC 401/402 or corequisite EDUC 403. Students who have received credit for EDUC 472 prior to the 2001-2 semester, may not take this course for further credit.
