COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course we will examine the theoretical frameworks that inform curriculum practice. Curriculum always involves political and ethical choices and is always embedded in social/historical/cultural contexts. We will explore competing approaches to curriculum in North America today, and examine the cultural and ideological assumptions that underpin these approaches. We will critically consider not only what we teach, but also why we teach it and how we teach it. Through this analysis we will develop the ability to critically evaluate various approaches. We will extend this critical awareness by reflecting on our own theoretical frameworks and practices. This course will also develop beginning skills in constructing curriculum.
