

Spring SEMESTER 2008 COURSE OUTLINE

EDUC 471-4 (EDUCATION) CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT: THEORY AND PRACTICE C100

In British Columbia, the purposes of education, classroom outcomes, and strategies for teaching and learning are prescribed, or at least strongly indicated, by the "Mission Statement for Schools," "Integrated Resource Packages," and other Ministry of Education documents. Teachers must nevertheless choose from the prescribed ends, because they can't teach everything that's listed, and they must adapt the suggested teaching methods to local conditions. As teachers plan their lessons, they must at least be able to choose wisely. This course provides theoretical and practical ideas to enable prospective and practicing teachers to develop educational curricula and to choose well from curricula developed by others. It also provides a theoretical framework to allow teachers to comment on the merits of curriculum proposals they'll encounter during their careers.
