COURSE DESCRIPTION

This methods course is for elementary social studies teachers. The orientation of the course will be what is sometimes referred to a "studio-conference" approach (this is the approach used in "writer's workshop") where the tone of classroom activities will be less a matter of "listen and learn" and more a matter of "confer and produce." The overriding focus will be working with the instructor and a small group of fellow student to develop a comprehensive unit package (a set of lesson plans and supporting materials) for the teaching of social studies at a chosen grade level. Disk copies of all packages produced will be shared with other members of the class.

OBJECTIVES

To enhance teachers' ability to plan and make use of a wide range of teaching strategies, learning resources and assessment practices to deliver a social studies program at the elementary school level that is engaging for students, effectively integrates other subject areas and infuses critical thinking throughout.

REQUIREMENTS

unit package (group project) - 70%
end-of-course conference - 20%
self- and peer-assessment - 10%
