Teachers of Arithmetic and Mathematics lessons want to be certain that all students:

- master the understandings and skills of computation
- enjoy and work hard at the necessary activities
- meet challenges and problems of increasing difficulty that they can all succeed at
- use what they learn in the study of other school subjects and in the mathematics of their future grade level

This course will use a variety of materials and teaching strategies to accomplish those objectives. It will relate closely to the B.C.
Curriculum Guide..

- use what they learn in the study of other school subjects and in the mathematics of their future grade level

This course will use a variety of materials and teaching strategies to accomplish those objectives. It will relate closely to the B.C. Curriculum Guide.

The course is for elementary and junior secondary teachers but not only for those who specialize in mathematics. It will be essentially practical and it is hoped that participants will, as part of the course, use many of the strategies, materials and ways of working in their own classrooms. Consequently every teacher will be able to affect what is actually done in the evening sessions.
