

SIMON FRASER UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
ANNUAL REPORT 2005/2006

☞ The Library Opens Its Eyes

Robert Bringhurst

MEANING trickles down the sides of nouns and verbs. This is how it happens that a sentence, like a hoofprint or a leaf, becomes a little watershed of meaning. Like water shaping earth, meaning nudges words and sentences around. It rolls them, sculpts them, polishes them, shapes them into landscapes we call stories.

☞ Books – the real ones, not the imitations – are like continents and islands. Meaning spills down over them and spreads in all directions, forming creeks and lakes and rivers. You may never see those rivers, deep in the underbrush of the book, but after a few moments of deep reading you may start to hear them flowing through your bones or feel them filling up the space between your toes. Settle into a book – a real one, that is – and you'll find yourself wading or swimming or fishing or drowning in meaning.

☞ Watersheds are concave. Worlds are convex. Worlds double back upon themselves. They swallow their own tails and keep on going. Their watersheds are woven with rainstorms and glaciers and oceans and snowdrifts and clouds. That is how it is with the watersheds of meaning. One lake may be enough to fish and live beside forever; one island may be home; one book may seem enough to read; but it does not make a world.

☞ Library buildings are not often spherical, yet libraries – real ones, that is – with their square-cornered pages on square-cornered shelves, are as round as the globe. Every book in the library leads to another, which leads to another, which leads to a book you have already read but cannot read again as you read it before, because of the others you've read in between. Invisible rivers and fogbanks and glaciers and blizzards of meaning sweep through the stacks. The library acts like a world, because it is a working model of the world, built from simple bricks of printed paper in an ever-changing order. Logical systems of organization never fit what it contains. Arbitrary systems – Melvil Dewey's decimals or the sequence of the alphabet, for instance – are the only ones that serve. Like the world and every creature in it – and like every stream and river – the library constantly changes its mind and follows its nose. You cannot step twice into the same collection of books.

☞ Its lifeblood is meaning, but readers are its life. They are the neurons in its brain. Without them the library closes its eyes and shuts its mind – and yours as well – forever.

Colophon

☛ There are 300 copies of this broadside, issued in commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of Simon Fraser University. The piece was printed by Alex Widen at the Sandhill Press in Vancouver. The paper is Arches, mouldmade at a papermill founded in 1469 near the old monastery of Spinalium, on the Moselle, in northeastern France. The types – Amethyst for the text and Albertan on the title page – were both designed by Jim Rimmer at the Pie Tree Press & Foundry, New Westminster, British Columbia. The fleuron, pilcrow, and initial were designed in Italy and Austria by Giovanni de Faccio and Lui Karner.

Introduction

What is an academic library in 2006? The activity encompassed is breathtaking. This year's Annual Report particularly makes the point. As I write this, one library staff member is in Pretoria, South Africa; this year library staff have reported on our activities in India, Norway, Denmark, England, and all over North America; upcoming are trips to Brazil, Vietnam and South Korea. Herein are described book collections, electronic resources, academic support for students, software development, reference support, a wide range of equipment support and distribution, and publishing support. All this in addition to the continually morphing traditional reference, loans and processing services. And these activities take place in an environment of continually evolving collaboration, partnership and sharing with faculty, librarian colleagues, and students. Library space is being repurposed to meet these new requirements with a variety of active learning spaces and contemplative study areas being configured throughout the three SFU libraries. Still, research libraries continue as the world described most evocatively in Robert Bringhurst's poetic essay on the cover of this annual report.

Collections

In this 40th year of collection building at SFU Library, our activities were buoyed by the strength of the Canadian dollar and by continued University support. In forty years the SFU Library collections have grown to well over two million volumes – a significant achievement, and a valuable legacy for the next forty years, and beyond. In addition to continuing to support established teaching and research at SFU, we developed collections in new growth areas for the university, including Health Sciences, Interactive Arts & Technology, and French language programming. Following the same pattern of spending in recent years, two thirds of the Library's materials budget was spent on serials, and one third on monographs and other one-time acquisitions.

The growth of our electronic collections continued apace, with some notable acquisitions. As part of SFU's participation in a new round of national licensing through the Canadian Research Knowledge Network, we significantly deepened our online resources in the Humanities and Social Sciences. Generous donations by SFU Alumni funded the purchase of the digitized 19th Century House of Commons Parliamentary Papers of the UK, an invaluable source of primary documents covering this significant period in British, Canadian and colonial history.

Electronic journal usage showed an increase of twenty-five per cent over the previous year, with the most highly used journals, Nature (23,706 articles downloaded) and Science (17,965 articles downloaded) showing usage increases of more than twenty per cent. The top twenty most used electronic journals came from chemistry, physics, biology, health sciences, and psychology. During 2005 we also saw more than 800,000 accesses to the Library's licensed databases and well over three million unique searches made of these databases. This level of usage clearly illustrates the value of our investment in these online products.

This year we updated the Library's overall collection development policy to complement the subject-specific policies that direct our collection building. The policy now includes guidelines for formats such as electronic books, DVDs and electronic data sets.

Maps/Data/GIS

This year both our traditional paper and digital map collections were expanded, through donations of paper maps and a complete set of DMTI's Satellite StreetView imagery data for all of Canada. The imagery dataset is stored on a 300GB HD for distribution to researchers and GIS labs.

Media Collection

The Media Collection was featured in SFU's student newspaper, The Peak, in an article by Sean Trembath about the film collection, entitled, Free films (use responsibly)

<http://www.peak.sfu.ca/the-peak/2005-3/issue7/ar-sfufyi.html>.

The popular BBC video series Shock of the New was withdrawn from the collection, as BBC discontinued the licence for educational use in Canada. Improved access to films is now provided through a monthly list of new films, linked from the Film Guide on the library home page.

"I'm now seeing what's in your media collection and am pleased to find so many video artworks... I'm especially happy to find the Video Data Bank early video collection – there are so many seminal works in there..." (film student)

"This is cool!" "You have lots of films here that you can't find in video stores." (Student)

Games at Surrey

The important games collection at the Surrey library continued to be expanded to support programming at that site. A new games system, Nintendo DS, was purchased for the Games Room and additional games were purchased including some 'girl games' in support of the Women in Technology – Girl Gamers Club. A Games Room advisory group of students was established. Improvements to the catalogue records now enable searching by the game system.

Services

"Library staff through their work are collaborators in a common effort of faculty, sessional instructors, teaching assistants, and fellow students helping each other to create a learning commons at SFU by which we can share knowledge, know-how, and perspectives. I have been profoundly affected by students coming from other countries where they did not have access to so many books, periodicals, and online resources and the people who work so hard to build and maintain this shared commonwealth. Their excitement and joy at being given access to both the materials and the librarians and other staff helped me better appreciate the importance of what we are trying to do together." (Faculty member)

Information Commons

This year saw the continuance of the successful partnership between the WAC Bennett Library and Academic Computing Services (ACS) in providing an integrated service point for reference and technical assistance, as well as integrated hardware and software. With the opening of the Student Learning Commons in September 2006, there is even greater potential to provide more collaborative and integrated support to students with the addition of academic writing programs and activities within WAC Bennett Library.

"Thank you very much to the helpful staff at the Alumni Information Commons and at the Microforms for helping me research an article and saving me a great amount of time! Great customer service!!!" (Student)

Ask Us Live

The Library's collaborative Ask Us Live service with the University of Victoria continued to thrive, with increased hours and positive feedback from SFU users. Building on the success of the service, planning is underway to participate in the BC-wide, post-secondary virtual reference service which will be administered through the BC Electronic Library Network. Funding for software, training, and communications has been provided by the Ministry of Advanced Education. SFU and UVic will play a key role in sharing our successful practices with the wider post-secondary community. As a prototype for the anticipated wider service, SFU participated in the BCcampus Chat Reference Pilot project, which extended chat reference service to users within the Library Services

"u rock! thanks man! have a wicked day" (AUL patron)

Gateway of the BCcampus Portal. SFU, UVic, and UBC staffed the service, which was targeted to students at Camosun College, College of the Rockies, Kwantlen University College, and University College of the Fraser Valley.

Ask Us Here

The Ask Us Here team test drove a new cart beginning Spring 2006 to provide better support for this expanding service which continues to answer students' questions at their point of need, provide opportunities for faculty liaison, and raise awareness of Library services. To provide support at the Segal School of Business, Belzberg librarians extended the 'Ask Us Here' service downtown to the Segal Centre lobby.

"I received an emergency call from ... National TV this morning... They were at Cambie and headed my way. I needed some current data in a hurry and contacted our liaison librarian. Within 15-20 minutes he found, screened and e-mailed the relevant statistics to me -- just in time for the interview. (Faculty member)"

Other Contacts

In addition to providing reference services to SFU students, faculty, staff, and the community at the Information Commons desk, liaison librarians in the Reference Division also met with users upon request.

Instruction

Course-integrated

Demand for course-integrated instruction rose significantly in 2005/06 as liaison librarians developed new – and fostered existing – relationships with faculty across disciplines. Librarians deliver instruction in a variety of locations using many different methods. They teach in labs and lecture halls in the Library and on-campus, meet users online via detailed web pages and off campus upon request.

"Setting up the course web site as you have, walking us through some of the main indices they'll use and, above all, offering to serve as a resource for their projects will, I am confident, make a major contribution to the success of the seminar. So, thanks for putting the time in -- I appreciate it." (Faculty member)

More than 18,000 students attended course-integrated instruction classes in 2005/06, compared with 15,297 in 2004/05. Business, Psychology, and Communication were the heaviest instruction areas, followed by Education, English, and Biology. The Library's Understanding and Avoiding Plagiarism tutorial was installed in over thirty courses in 2005/06.

General Instruction

While the majority of our instruction is course-related, there is a continuing need to provide general drop-in classes. We continue to receive positive feedback from students with regard to the Essay Architecture Fair, offered in collaboration with the Health and Counselling Centre (HCC). The Student Learning Commons will offer further opportunities for joint programs for students in 2006/07.

Journals and Microform Assistance Desk

"Had I asked for help from you earlier, I could have saved days of research. But I know who to look for next time when I need help :-). Thanks a lot!!"
(Undergraduate student)

Although it is located by the print journals and microformats, many of the questions at the JAMA Desk are about e-journals. Researchers who are inexperienced at retrieving online articles sometimes arrive at the sixth floor expecting to find the print version of a journal, then ask for help when they find that we no longer have their title in print, or they ask for help navigating e-journal publisher sites. There is always a need for ongoing training on the quirks of newer e-journal publisher sites and aggregator databases.

Thesis Support

The Thesis office has increased its support for students over the past few years, with classes available early in the process; online documentation; and increased contact with students. In addition, an online thesis information submission form was developed. The result has been a significant reduction in late submissions from nine per cent to below one per cent.

As well the turnaround time for processing items has been greatly reduced. In previous years it was not until late in the following semester that the final approval was given to the majority of submissions. This has now been cut in half and most of the submissions are approved by the middle of the next semester. This reduction means that the items are then digitized and made available in a much shorter period of time.

"I just completed my dissertation and oral defence and want to thank the Telebook staff of for the excellent service provided to me throughout the past three years. My "text-based" thesis meant that I ordered a large number of books. Requested books always arrived promptly. These services provided to me in interior BC by Telebook were critical to my course work and dissertation." (Graduate student)

Loans Services

Our popular laptop/notebook service continues to thrive with 19,543 laptop circulations. Headphones circulated 4,445 times. The number of laptops will be doubled to fifty for the Fall 2006 semester and the loan period extended from two to four hours. The SFU Surrey library also loans laptops and a variety of other equipment to support its unique programmes. In addition, thanks to staff and others' donations during the 2006 Campus Campaign, presentation equipment for use in the group study rooms will soon be available for checkout at the WAC Bennett Library.

The "Food for Fines" drives in Summer and Fall 2005 were once again very successful. The Library received 2,350 food items from 514 patrons and waived $4,676 in fines.

Thirty pedometers were offered for lending in support of HCC's 'Walk this Way' program from September 19th to October 20th.

Reserve Services

A number of new reserve services have been introduced. Print articles requested for Reserve are now also searched online; for nine per cent of a total of 3,521 articles, a link was provided to the online version as well. Online Reserve Request forms, made available July 2005, are being very well received. An Exam Bank Repository will be available June 2006 for interested faculty. Courseware Packages will be placed on Reserve effective Summer 2006 at the request of the course instructor. Finally, as of Summer 2006, a new Business Competition collection, consisting of approximately 100 case studies referenced by students in the annual Business Competitions, will be added to the Reserve collection on a permanent basis.

University Outreach

"The Library at Simon Fraser University has been quite successful in developing an outreach program to the entire University community. The efforts of the library liaison to the Faculty of Business Administration are particularly noteworthy. Many students are familiar with this person due to such actions as weekly e-mail newsletter and occasional sessions during which he sets up a table in the Faculty of Business Administration building to meet with anyone strolling down the hallway. As a result, library usage among students is heavy and particularly effective." (One of four highlighted "strengths and effective practices" cited in the acceptance letter from the AACSB accreditation team.)

Public services staff on all three campuses continue to contribute to a wide range of outreach activities on and off campus to inform the wider community about the services, resources and programs accessible through the Library. In 2005/06 these included:

- Benefits and Services Fair for new faculty .
- Week of Welcome orientation in September 2005.
- Alumni Day Open House in October 2005.
- Burnaby Public Library visit in November 2005.
- Learning and Instructional Development Centre's Symposium on Innovative Teaching.
- Teaching Assistant/Tutor Marker Day.
- Tutor Marker Orientations.
- Student Services Fair for new and transfer students at the beginning of each semester.
- Tours for Library visitors.

Student Learning Commons

In May 2005 Vice-President Academic John Waterhouse announced that "SFU will establish an academic learning centre, connected to, and in support of, the ongoing curriculum project. The Learning Commons has a mandate to assist and support students in their academic pursuits and to provide learning support services across the 3 SFU campuses. The SFU Learning Commons will open officially in September 2006 in the WAC Bennett Library, and eventually in other SFU Library sites." One year later, with much behind-the-scenes work, we are on track for the September 2006 opening.

Building on the existing services of the Alumni Information Commons and the HCC Learning Skills program, the Student Learning Commons (SLC) will offer a wide range of academic assistance to undergraduate and graduate students, including academic writing, learning strategies, library research, computer technology, English language skills, theses formatting advice and more. Over fifteen peer educators will receive specialized writing and learning support training for Fall 2006.

The SLC is working to create and maintain effective relationships with many campus groups. In particular, the SLC has strong ties to the Yosef Wosk Student Learning Commons at SFU Surrey, and will be working through the Belzberg Library at Harbour Centre to deliver services at SFU Vancouver. The Writing-intensive Learning Office (WILO) is another important partner, especially given the "W" requirements of SFU's new undergraduate curriculum, while traditional links with many Student Services units will be maintained and strengthened. The SLC's goal is to provide students with "one stop" for academic support services, and "one step" referrals to other campus services.

The SLC will be located in the NW corner of the Bennett Library's main floor. Its virtual location will be at <http://learningcommons.sfu.ca>.

Elaine Fairey was appointed SLC Director in December 2005, in addition to her responsibilities as Associate University Librarian for Bennett Public Services. Learning Services Coordinator Donna McGee Thompson and the HCC Learning Skills programme transferred to the SLC in April 2006, and Dr. Amanda Goldrick-Jones was appointed Writing Services Coordinator in May 2006. Thesis Support will move to the SLC to provide more seamless referral to SLC services of interest to graduate students.

Processing

Items catalogued increased by 20%, a testament to the hard work and dedication of everyone in the Processing Division and to workflow improvements. With an increase in monograph receipts of fifteen percent and a doubling of new serials subscriptions over the previous year, meeting fiscal year end was a challenge which staff met through initiative and flexibility in assigning tasks to make sure orders were placed, materials received and invoices paid by March 31. In order to improve workflow and public access, renovations were undertaken in the processing area and should be completed in Summer 2006.

"I just wanted to say what wonderful staff you've got up there. I phoned up looking for a new book which had gone MIA after being catalogued. Two of your staff, hunted the beast and delivered it to me in about 20 minutes. I was very impressed at the wonderful service!" (Liaison librarian)

Library Technology/Special Projects

Last spring a newly designed Online Public Access Catalogue was introduced. It looks more contemporary and takes advantage of some recent improvements in functionality in the Innovative Interfaces software. User feedback has been very positive.

"Software @ SFU Library" (<http://software.lib.sfu.ca/>) outlines the extensive range of open source software developed and/or hosted at the SFU Library. The software includes SFU Library's reSearcher suite – Citation Manager, CUFTS, dbWiz, GODOT – and the PKP suite, a very productive and positive partnership with the Public Knowledge Project and SFU's Canadian Centre for Studies in Publishing. These products benefit the Library and users from two perspectives: we are able to avoid the costs of commercial equivalents. The cost of development and support costs are shared among a number of partner institutions. There has been significant uptake of both software suites during the past year. Our OJS hosting services now provide support to fifteen journals at various stages of implementation and the OJS software is now in use by over 700 journals worldwide.

- Heather De Forest joined the Belzberg Library as liaison for Urban Studies and Public Policy and has also assumed responsibility for Geography in Burnaby.
- Frances Dodd (formerly with Innovative Interfaces Inc. [III] and Online Computer Library Centre [OCLC] Canada) was hired as Technical Services librarian.
- Liza Eurich, Surrey Library Assistant has replaced Cecilia Roberts who has left to pursue other goals.
- Patty Gallilee agreed to take on the position of Acquisitions/Serials Division Head in what is now a continuing role.
- Amanda Goldrick-Jones was hired as the SLC Writing Services Coordinator.
- Donna McGee Thompson, Learning Services Coordinator was transferred to the SLC from the HCCC Learning Skills programme in April 2006.
- Cynthia Wright was hired as Surrey Student Learning Commons coordinator.

Retirements

- Jack Corse, Reference Librarian.
- Cindy Swoveland, Reference Librarian, Belzberg.
- Claude LeFrançois, Library Assistant, Sorting Room.

Visitors to SFU Library

- Lynn Copeland met with eighteen publishers from Shanghai hosted by the Canadian Centre for Studies in Publishing.
- Professor Uma Coomaraswamy, Vice Chancellor, Open University of Sri Lanka, came to Simon Fraser University for a study visit and toured the WAC Bennett Library.
- Peter Trower, poet-writer.
- Ellie Nichol, wife of author bp Nichol.
- Lisa Robertson, writer.
- Dr. Barbara Godard (York University – work on Open Letter).
- Michael Bough (work on Charles Olson).
- Linda Quick (work on Pauline Johnson).
- Cindy Zimmerman (work on Betty Lambert).
- Roy Peterson (editorial cartoonist).
- Mike Apsey (donor of cartoons).
- Judy Wu (work on Gary Snyder).
- Mary Innes, a librarian on exchange from Victoria University of Wellington in New Zealand.
- North Korean Delegation visited the SFU Surrey Library.
- Eleven librarians from Scandinavia came to visit SFU and toured WAC Bennett Library.
- Ruth Ivey, Information Services, Team Leader, University of Waikato Library Hamilton, New Zealand. Visited Information Commons, Reference and Document Delivery. Provided information about the University of Waikato Library and a demonstration of its web site to liaison librarians.
- Dale Lackeyram, Learning Specialist, Learning Commons, University of Guelph. Toured the evolving Student Learning Commons spaces with Elaine Fairey and Donna McGee Thompson.

Staff

Notable Staff Changes

Appointments

- Warren Bandzmer was hired as Continuing Surrey Campus Media Technician.
- Gwen Bird was appointed Associate University Librarian, Collection Services, in addition to her responsibilities as Head of Collections Management Division.
- Gordon Coleman has accepted a position with ELN role, replacing John Durno.
- Elaine Fairey was appointed SLC Director in December 2005, in addition to her responsibilities as Associate University Librarian for Bennett Public Services.

Two SFU Library technology accomplishments deserve special mention. First, the dbWiz metasearch application, developed at SFU Library with the support of nine partner libraries in Western Canada, was launched and has received attention in the library technology literature and worldwide. This service allows users to search more than one of our licensed databases at once, and also has the ability to search library catalogues and free content on the Web. One of the developers, Calvin Mah, was asked to address a major library technology conference in South Africa.

reSearcher

As in past years, development of the reSearcher applications (GODOT, CUFTS, Citation Manager, and dbWiz) continues, resulting in economical, functional, and flexible services for SFU Library users and staff. This year, all of the applications became available to the world under an Open Source license, and interest in reSearcher from around the world is increasing rapidly.

In December and January, Systems staff assisted Roskilde University in Denmark (http://www.ruc.dk/ruc_en/) to set up and use GODOT, CUFTS, and dbWiz. Roskilde reimbursed SFU for this work and Kevin Stranack visited their campus to assist with local configuration and to make a presentation to librarians from 26 Danish libraries.

PKP

In May 2005, the University of British Columbia's PKP (Public Knowledge Project) software -- which includes open source journal publishing system, a conference management system, and a metadata harvester -- moved to SFU Library as its permanent home. Since the move, SFU has coordinated the development and release of two minor upgrades to Open Journal Systems, and an entire rewrite of the PKP Metadata Harvester.

The SFU Library is a leading participant in the Synergies initiative, which is intended to build a sustainable ejournal publishing platform for Canadian journals. SFU Library is a key participant in the Synergies CFI submission, with OJS software being used at four of the five partner sites; SFU Library demonstrated 'proof of concept' export of OJS journal metadata to the Synergies prototype site.

Digitization

Activity in this area continues to grow. This year, the Digitization Center scanned 2633 retrospective and 588 new theses, which will shortly be available in the SFU Institutional Repository. We also scan an average of 30 textbooks per semester for students with visual or learning disabilities. This year we also digitized the complete run of Archivaria (50 volumes), 240 items from a personal collection of memorabilia from the May 1968 Paris Labour Riots, 171 items from the Library's Harrison Brown Collection, and over 100 items from the Library's Doukhobor Collection. Work continues on the Editorial Cartoons Collection, with an additional 150 cartoons added this year and the development of a series of teachers' guides for the Cartoons.

The Library has now scanned 27,000 pages of the Chinese Times, as part of the Multicultural Canada initiative, and is making these available on the web. Also as part of Multicultural Canada, the Library has made the Encyclopedia of Canada's Peoples available as a searchable database.

Library Building and Equipment Services

The WAC Bennett Library continues to undergo renovations to improve services in the changing academic environment.

Services for the Student Learning Commons will be located on the entry level in the northwest corner adjacent to the Alumni Information Commons to bring those services together physically as well as operationally. After suffering in an increasingly inadequate space, the Media Resource Centre will be located on the entry level in the southeast corner, with the collections brought together in one space and new services such as a viewing room available. Document Delivery Services, which works closely with the Media Resource Centre, will be located adjacent to it in the northeast corner. Thanks to generous donations by Library staff and others during two Campus Campaigns, the casual reading area on floor three received a significant facelift including the addition of counters and stools by the Mall window and electrical and wireless support for laptop use. In order to improve public access to the Processing area and workflows, renovations were undertaken in that part of the building as well.

Samuel and Frances Belzberg Library

The Belzberg Library undertook a pilot project to test the viability of Sunday Hours, opening the library on Sundays from 10 am to 5 pm during Spring 2006. Most visitors were undergraduate students who used the library to study, work on assignments and do research for their papers. Based on its success, it is expected that this service will continue in Fall 2006.

Cross-library co-ordination of library services is becoming increasingly important with departments offering courses on all three campuses. The business liaison librarian and Belzberg librarians coordinated enhanced library instruction at the Segal Centre for Business and collaborated with faculty and administrators to develop the right mix of library support for the new building.

"The information I am able to obtain through your collection is invaluable to my work as an artist and my effectiveness as a citizen. Also the helpfulness of the staff at Belzberg (where I order and pick up my books) is always outstanding." (Alumnus)

SFU Surrey Library

With the expansion of programming at SFU Surrey, the Library continues to grow and enhance its services. By the second week of classes in Fall 2005, students were complaining that the Library was full and there was nowhere to sit; additional seats were added but the move to the new library space in summer 2006 is eagerly awaited.

The SFU Surrey Student Learning Commons was created by expanding the mandate of the Tech One Success Centre to serve all Surrey students and to articulate with the Burnaby Student Learning Commons, under the direction of Coordinator Cynthia Wright. In honour of a generous gift, the new SLC space will be named the Yosef Wosk Student Learning Commons.

Library Special Events

- SFU Library Special collections commissioned, and had published The Library Opens Its Eyes, by Robert Bringhurst in celebration of the SFU 40th Anniversary (reproduced on cover).
- The Multicultural Canada Conference (May 31— June 2) brought together community, scholars, librarians, and archivists. Speakers talked about a wide variety of projects which together form a knowledge base of online resources which help us represent Canada's multicultural diversity and history to ourselves and to the world. Perhaps the most exciting aspect of the conference was the engagement of community, librarians, government and academics which took place during the sessions and especially during the breaks. The papers from the conference are available in the SFU Library institutional repository at <http://ir.lib.sfu.ca/handle/1892/2511>.
- SFU Library hosted the BC Academic Librarians in Public Services Meeting in December 2005 focussed on "The Future of Reference."
- SFU Library promoted its services with a booth at Word on the Street, September 2005.
- Share the Enthusiasm Lecture Series:
 - > October 19, 2005 Wally Chung, "Collecting History".
 - > March 22, 2006 Andrew Feenberg, "Collecting on in the Barricades during Paris May Events of 1968."
- Talks:
 - > April 21, 2005 "The Origin and Evolution of the Shanty Bay Press" by Walter Bachinsky & Janis Butler in cooperation with the Alcuin Society.
 - > September 26, 2005 - launch of Companions and Horizons : An Anthology of Simon Fraser University Poetry ed. by S. Collis. (Burnaby, BC : West Coast Line, 2005).
 - > October 29, 2005 Sue Allen, "The Brilliance of Cloth Book Covers : Decorated Publishers' Bindings in America, 1830-1910" - The Annual Yosef Wosk - Friends of SFU Library Special Collections & Alcuin Society Lecture.
- Special Collections readings:
 - > September 22, 2005 Lynn Coady.
 - > October 27, 2005 Eden Robinson.
 - > November 24, 2005 Evelyn Lau.
 - > March 2, 2006 Larissa Lai.
 - > March 16, 2006 Nancy Richler.
- Exhibitions:
 - > September 22—24, 2005 'J.S. Woodsworth: an exhibition at the Woodsworth Conference.
 - > October 20, 2005 Mirhady lecture—exhibition of recently acquired Persian material.
 - > 40 years of collecting in Special Collections & Rare Books.
 - > An Exhibit Acknowledging Gifts from 2005.
 - > Political Ephemera from the Last Provincial Election.
 - > First 40. Selections from an exhibition of early SFU graduate theses and projects, at WAC Bennett Library and Belzberg Library.
 - > SFU Archives 40th Anniversary display, at WAC Bennett Library and Belzberg Library.
 - > The Library Diversity Working Group (LDWG) continued its series of displays this year including Sustainable Technologies (work from students in First Nations Studies), Children from Around the World, Robbie Burns Day/Chinese New Year Celebration, Freedom to Read Week, Dr. B.R. Ambedkar and Human Rights, and Convocation 2006: A Taste of Graduate Scholarship.

The Surrey collections budget was increased to cover expanding programs; the book & media collections have grown by 26% over the last year, and circulation of these collections has increased by 64%.

"I always find great materials here. This is an incredibly rich collection for its size" (Graduate student)

"Thanks to what I learned with you I was able to get the "A" I was hoping for." (1st year education student re SLC)

A variety of online materials and workshops were created to support the use and circulation of equipment for SIAT and other students. Funding for equipment was provided by the VP Academic and the Faculty of Applied Sciences. MiniDVD tapes and Arduino circuit boards are sold through the Library. The Library works closely with ACS to provide these services.

BC Electronic Library Network

Funded by the BC Ministry of Advanced Education, the BC ELN is housed within SFU Library. Its activities are governed by a representative Steering Committee. Its role is to "work with post-secondary libraries to provide equitable, expanded and cost-effective access to information for learners and educators throughout British Columbia." Further information about BC ELN can be found at: <http://eln.bc.ca>

In 2005/06, for the first time, three sectors (academic, public, and school libraries) worked collaboratively to provide a provincial license, to the online Encyclopedia of British Columbia. BC ELN was a lead participant in the development work for the e-HLbc consortium, a leading-edge cross-sectoral project involving BC's academic and health libraries. Negotiations were completed and highly advantageous pricing obtained for the first suite of products, in time for the e-HLbc launch April 1, 2006. Another barrier to resource-sharing fell, with the elimination of charges for interlibrary book loans among BC post-secondary libraries, effective January 1, 2006.

*Due to space restrictions, only donors who have contributed $100+ are listed.

Donations

As in previous years, the Library was generously supported by gifts and in-kind donations. Thanks to our supporters, our Alumni Library Endowment, General Library Endowment, and Technology Endowment funds were strengthened. Income from these funds was used to strengthen our book and electronic collections and to enable us to undertake key renovations, particularly the Media Resource Centre and Student Learning Commons. Renovations to the casual seating area on Floor 3 were funded through generous matched contributions by Library staff and others during the 2005 and 2006 Campus Campaigns.
