- c) change of number, title, description and prerequisite for FPA 163
- d) change of title, description and prerequisite for FPA 262, 263, 265, 269, 362, 363, 364, 365, 369.”
- e) changes to the lower and upper division credit hour requirements for the Major program
- f) transfer of visual art skills courses to methods and concepts courses
- g) changes to the lower and upper division credit hour requirements for the extended Minor program.

Any Senator wishing to consult the full report of curriculum revisions should contact Bobbie Grant, Senate Assistant at 291-3168 or email bgrant@sfu.ca

EXTENDED RATIONALE:
CHANGING VISUAL ART SKILLS COURSES TO METHODS AND CONCEPTS COURSES

For some time, the Visual Art area has had scheduling difficulties in offering the required skills courses necessary to complete both the Extended Minor and the BFA major. Lack of teaching support has meant putting these courses into three and four-semester rotation, making it awkward for students (especially in the Extended Minor) to complete the required 4 or 6 courses in the time allocated for the completion of their degree.

A second problem has been the limited range of available offerings. The pedagogic mandate of the program, which is to prepare students for a shifting environment of contemporary artistic practices, has been compromised by this lack of breadth. It has also meant that core faculty are not able to teach inside their areas of expertise.

To alleviate these concerns, the area is proposing to eliminate the present 2-course-per-skill model (one upper and one lower) by collapsing the two together and changing the emphasis of the resultant course to a broad-ranging introduction to all aspects of the given skill, as it pertains to actual contemporary art practice. This serves several functions: it gives students a one-semester introduction to an art practice which can then be taken directly into the core studio courses for further development; it allows the new offerings to be taken either as upper or lower division courses, depending on the student's requirements, and it effectively doubles the number of available skills courses while allowing for more regularized offerings and expedient degree completions.

A second benefit of this reduction is that it allows the existing Selected Topics courses (FPA 269/369) to be used in the same manner, to introduce a repeating range of topics currently unavailable to the students but which are crucial topics for work in contemporary art; these include time-based media, installation practices, performance work and computer-based processes. This will also correspond more closely to the actual research capacities of the current faculty, allowing them to do direct teaching in the areas of their research and expertise.

Under the current model, we are able to offer 2 or 3 skills courses a semester, which will continue under the proposed model; typically this means 5 courses a year. Now, however, students may choose from a possible range of 8 or 9 different topics within a 2-year cycle, whereas previously they had 4 or 5 in a 3 to 4 year rotation.

In conjunction with this change, we are proposing to reduce the current 6 skills-course requirement in the Extended Minor to 4, allowing for more expedient degree completion.

This proposal does not entail adding new courses. Using existing numbers with new course descriptions, it improves the range of course offerings and strengthens pedagogy in the area, eases degree completion, and allows faculty to teach what they know.

SIMON FRASER UNIVERSITY
Program Change Form

Major in Visual Art

Rationale:

The visual art major program has not been changed for several years, and the following changes are proposed to make the program more efficient and to improve the focus of its pedagogy. Because the program is cumulative, we have changed some prerequisites to ensure that students are properly prepared for advanced courses. Students have encountered certain difficulties completing their degree requirements on time under the current structure, which has led to an adjustment of the skills courses, now called Methods and Concepts, to offer greater variety and to more accurately reflect the pedagogic direction of the program. Changes to the art and culture curriculum are also incorporated into these revisions.

Visual Art Major Program

The bachelor of fine arts - major in visual art prepares students to become practising artists. A combination of broad-based practical studio courses in conjunction with theoretical and historical seminars allows students to understand their own production in relation to current developments in visual art and other disciplines. A strong emphasis is placed on developing an understanding of the position and responsibilities of the artist in contemporary society.

Entry to visual art studio courses, and to the visual art major program is by portfolio interview. Contact the general office for further information. Students applying to the major program must have completed their first year requirements or the equivalent.

The attention of students whose interest in visual art is related primarily to its historical, critical, or theoretical aspects, is directed to the art and culture studies major program, leading to a BA degree.
