NEW GRADUATE COURSE PROPOSAL FORM

Subject: EDUC (max. 4 chars) Catalog Number: 944

Course Title: Aesthetic Ways of Knowing and Education (max. 80 char.)

Short Title (appears on transcripts etc.) Aesthetic Ways of Knowing (max. 25 char.)

Course Description for Calendar: (append a course outline as a separate document)

This course explores, critically, the historical and emergent role and responsibility of the arts in human development, learning and personal transformation. Aesthetic ways of knowing with a focus on metaphor, imagination and archetype are examined together with various Indigenous and cultural perspectives. The course will consider how differing conceptions of arts and the work of artists can influence and have value for education and society, and in particular for arts education and educational researchers.

Rationale for Calendar Changes in the PhD Arts Education Program

#1. Added new course EDUC 943-5 Arts-Based Inquiry In Educational Research

Rationale: This course provides students with advanced education and training in the contemporary ideas and methodologies of arts-based research that are considered essential for students undertaking doctoral dissertations in arts education. Currently there is no course in the Faculty of Education meeting this need and students have to go to UBC under the Western Dean's agreement to gain access to comparable material. EDUC 943-5 provides advanced study in research ideas and methods that are compatible with the content and methods of artistic inquiry and takes advantage of existing and new faculty strengths in the area.

#2. Added new course EDUC 944-5 Aesthetic Ways of Knowing and Education

Rationale: This course provides important historical, cultural, indigenous and aesthetic contextual knowledge for artist educators researching the field of arts and aesthetic education. Currently there is no course in the Faculty of Education meeting this need. EDUC 944-5 provides advanced study of the role of the arts and aesthetic experience in human development, epistemological perspectives and transformation and takes advantage of existing faculty strengths in the area.

#3. Changing EDUC 901-5 Seminar In the History of Educational Thought and EDUC 902-5 Interdisciplinary Seminar in Contemporary Educational Theory to an ONE OF choice for the program.

The new choice of either EDUC 901 or EDUC 902, is intended to provide core educational studies background for all students but also make space for the inclusion of an arts course.

#4. Deletion of EDUC 910-5 Directed Readings

EDUC 910-5 is being deleted to accommodate one new arts course.

#5. Arts Education Calendar Changes: General Comments

The current CTI Arts Education PhD program, which includes the following courses: EDUC 901-5, EDUC 902-5, EDUC 945-5, and EDUC 910-5, has been running for sixteen years and is in need of upgrade. Currently the PhD program includes only one taught Arts course, which is seen as inadequate. The proposed program includes the new courses EDUC 943-5 and EDUC 944-5, the current course EDUC 945-5, and either EDUC 901 or EDUC 902.

A one course reduction in the Arts Education Master's program should relieve the instructor fte allocations. The Arts Education PhD program is a biennial program.

The course changes are designed to bring the program up to date and maintain its high profile as a leading, competitive, and unique arts education program in Canada and internationally, having a current enrolment of 27 PhD students. During the recent round of applications, arts faculty have recommended acceptance of 7 new PhD Arts Education students. Arts PhD courses will be open to students across the university and within the Faculty. Since there is no doctorate in the School for Contemporary Arts there are no overlap issues and this also widens the potential audience for our PhD program.
