Full Program Proposal for Honours Program in Humanities

A. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1. Purpose

Honours programs are a common feature of departments in the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences (FASS) and serve a set of recognized needs for advanced study within an undergraduate degree.

Since the inception of our Major program in 1998 many students and faculty in Humanities have asked for an advanced program to satisfy their interests in Humanities beyond the Major program. The creation of an Honours Program in Humanities will address this call from current and future students for advanced work in Humanities.

2. Key objectives and outcomes

The Honours program is meant for those students with a special interest in the Humanities who wish to pursue advanced studies beyond the Humanities Major with the benefit of faculty guidance. With the recent addition of the Master's program it is expected that the creation of an Honours program will be of particular benefit to students wishing to proceed to graduate studies in humanities at Simon Fraser University and elsewhere. The creation of the Honours program will also reinforce the unique and important role that Humanities courses provide in the University's curriculum.

B. CURRICULUM

What will the Student Gain?

Upon completion of the Honours Program, students will have acquired a thorough and integrated foundation in humanities and have developed skills in research, writing, textual interpretation, and critical thinking and analysis.

2. Honours Program Requirements

Program Courses: The program will consist of existing and newly approved courses, which already have sufficient relevant content, within the Humanities Department for a minimum of 18 lower-division (LD) Humanities units and 52 upper-division (UD) Humanities units. The courses have a range of topics which are congruent with the Humanities interdisciplinary curriculum as a whole.

Program Requirements

Lower-Division Requirements:

Entering students must first complete 65 credit hours in the Arts and Social Sciences, including the lower division Humanities major requirements and normally have a GPA of 3.33 or higher in lower-division Humanities courses. Students must submit an application for entrance into the program and consult the Humanities advisor.

Upper-Division Requirements:

Humanities majors will complete 32 upper-division units. Honours students must obtain an additional 20 units.

Students must successfully complete the following:

- HUM 401-4: Pre-Modern Studies
- HUM 422-4 The Humanities and the Critique of Culture
- HUM 480-4: Advanced Topics in the Humanities
- HUM 490-4: The Humanities Graduating Seminar
- HUM 495-4 Honours Essay

The lower-division core courses (18 units) were chosen to provide students with a foundational understanding of the Humanities discipline while the upper-division core courses (20 units) focus on advanced studies in Humanities with the benefit of faculty guidance.

Please see Appendix A for the full calendar entry for the Humanities Honours Program.

Other Relevant courses: Courses that, in a given semester, have relevant content may be applied to the Honours Program with prior approval from the department.

3. Course Descriptions

Please see Appendix B for a full description of courses applicable to the Honours Program.

4. Program Structure

Courses are taught as a lecture/tutorial or seminar. The courses will normally be offered on the Burnaby campus, with infrequent offerings according to need at Surrey or Harbour Centre. Class sizes range from 15-120 students on average.

Please see the chart below for past enrollments and frequency of offerings of the core courses. The lower-division core courses are offered frequently with the upper-division courses offered at least once a year. Given the breadth of Humanities core and elective courses offered, students should have no difficulty completing program requirements. No excessive impact is expected on the core/elective courses from Humanities given the number of choices and varied interest of students.

Core Courses	1091	1094	1097	1101	1104	1107	1111	1114	1117 (Anticipated)
HUM 101W	126	48	101	111		133	175	59	142
Plus two of:
HUM 102W	188	81	183	213	81	153	209	137	230
HUM 105				40		143			150
HUM 130	154	88	122	202	90	133	226	123	162
Plus one of:
HUM 201			48			18			20
HUM 202	26		16	13			27		28
HUM 203	15			17				30

HUM 401									28
HUM 422
HUM 480									28
HUM 490
HUM 495	9		2	20		5	11		2

Prerequisites:

None of the upper-division courses in the program are restricted to Honours students with the exception of HUM 495-4.

C. LEARNING METHODOLOGIES

1. Learning Environment and Methodologies

In the Honours Program, students are encouraged to examine the knowledge and ideas central to the humanities and to integrate these concerns in original and critical ways. It is this focus on the integrative process – the purposeful bringing together of historical, literary, philosophical, religious and aesthetic perspectives in the analysis of human cultures and contemporary society – that gives courses in Humanities their unique and important role in the University’s curriculum. Upon completion of the Honours Program, student will have acquired a through foundation in the study of humanities and have developed skills in research, writing, textual interpretation, and critical thinking and analysis.

Courses applicable to the Honours Program already exist and will achieve the intended outcomes for the program.

2. Other Learning Possibilities

HUM 102W-3 and HUM 130-3 are available by distance education.

D. FACULTY

No additional funding for faculty, staff, or instructors will be required as the courses are currently being taught with existing resources. The following continuing faculty members will contribute to the program:

- Dr. Ian Angus (Modern European thought, Canadian intellectual history)
- Dr. Paul Crowe (Philosophy and religion of the Song & Yuan dynasties, Daoism)
- Dr. Stephen Duguid (Enlightenment studies, Culture and Ecology)
- Dr. Paul Edward Dutton (Carolingian civilization, 12th-century Renaissance)
- Dr. Anne-Marie Feenberg-Dibon (Enlightenment, 19th & 20th-century European Fiction)
- Dr. Samir Gandesha (Modern European Thought and Culture)
- Dr. Christine Jones (Religion and Culture, Philosophy of Literature)
- Dr. Tsuyoshi Kawasaki (Japanese Culture, Asia-Canada Interaction)
- Dr. Shuyu Kong (Chinese Literature, Film and Popular Culture, Diaspora Culture)
- Dr. David Mirhady (Ancient Greek Rhetoric and Law)
- Dr. Emily O'Brien (Renaissance Italy)
- Dr. Eleanor Stebner (Religion, Culture, and Ideas)

The present number of faculty associated with the Honours Program gives it a certain durability during study leaves and other leaves of absences. As such, students should not be affected by inconsistent or limited course offerings due to faculty leaves. No new faculty positions are required for the proposed Honours Program.

PROGRAM CONSULTATIONS AND EVALUATION

The Humanities Honours program at SFU would be comparable to programs presently offered at SFU and at the University of Victoria and the University of British Columbia. The SFU Humanities Honours Program is consistent with the structure of Honours programs in other departments within FASS with some small differences both because of our own unique contribution to the field and available resources.

Two of the province's four research universities presently offer a variant of the Humanities Honours Program. The University of Victoria offers a BA (Honours) in Greek and Roman Studies or Medieval Studies. The University of British Columbia offers a BA (Honours) in Classical Studies; Myth and Literature in Greece, Rome, and Near East; Classics; and Religious Studies. SFU's Humanities Honours Program will be in keeping with the recognition of the importance of the humanities subject fields at other major institutions and will address a persistent student interest.

3. Ongoing Review and Evaluation

Once implemented, the Honours Program will be reviewed and evaluated by the Department of Humanities' Undergraduate Curriculum Committee. In addition, the Honours Program will be part of the Department of Humanities external review which occurs every six years.

F. ADMISSION

Admission Requirements

Prospective students must apply to Simon Fraser University for admission and meet the normal Simon Fraser University admission requirements. Honours Program admission must be obtained from the department advisor.

An annual cohort of 15-18 students is anticipated in this program.

G. OTHER

No additional funds, lab space, or equipment will be required
