MEMORANDUM

ATTENTION	Senate Committee on University Priorities	DATE	September 15, 2011
FROM	Bill Krane, Chair	PAGES	1/1
RE:	Senate Committee on Undergraduate Studies Faculty of Communication, Art and Technology (SCUS 11-43)	REVISED

Action undertaken by the Senate Committee on Undergraduate Studies at its meeting of September 15, 2011, gives rise to the following recommendation:

Motion:

That SCUP approve and recommend to Senate the Full Program Proposal for the B.A. in Cinema Studies within the Faculty of Communication, Art and Technology.

The relevant documentation for review by SCUP is attached.

October 19, 2011

From:

Christopher Pavsek

To:

Jon Driver
Vice President, Academic
Chair, Senate Committee on University Priorities
Simon Fraser University
Burnaby, BC

I attach this cover letter to the Full Program Proposal (FPP) for a BA in Cinema Studies to answer some questions and respond to some feedback received from SCUP regarding the initial Notice of Intent (NOI) and the FPP.

A question arose at the NOI stage about the anticipated enrolment in the program. As we discussed in Senate in our September meeting in regard to certificate programs, enrolments are very difficult to predict. I surveyed half a dozen programs in Canada to see what sorts of numbers they get, though it is not entirely clear what comparative value the results would have, given that the structures of the programs vary so widely, ranging from entire schools/faculties devoted to cinema, enrolling dozens upon dozens of students per year (Concordia), to small majors within non-cinema departments like English, enrolling half a dozen majors or so per year (U. Alberta).

One response, from the film program at UBC, however, is very telling, I believe. Though their program is not as robust as ours is projected to be (in terms of courses offered and the numbers of faculty involved) they receive 15-25 applicants to the major each year. This year (2011-12) they admitted 18 students to the major.

Given this, and given the enthusiasm that I encounter for the major from undergrads enrolled in my film studies courses, I have included an estimate of an initial enrolment of 6-10 majors. However, we hope for potential growth to approximately 18 majors per year as the program develops. If necessary, entrance requirements for the BA in Cinema Studies can be modified to restrict enrolment to manageable levels.

A question arose concerning the need for additional resources, since, as indicated in the NOI, demand for film courses has been high. The remark in the NOI about students being "turned away" applies primarily to classes in film production, and the BA does not require any courses in production. However, the point is well taken, and the School for Contemporary Arts is committed to meeting increased demand through the addition of tutorials and sections of upper level courses. I should reaffirm, though, that this will not involve the creation of any new courses.

There were concerns about available classroom space on the Vancouver campus: for a 400-level course, we have rooms available in Woodward's; for larger seminars, classrooms in Woodward's might work, or space can be sought in Burnaby or Surrey if none is available at Harbour Centre.

Questions were posed about the program's interdisciplinarity, given that no courses are specifically required outside of Contemporary Arts. First, I would like to affirm that we sincerely hope that students will build courses of study that take full advantage of courses outside of Contemporary Arts and that this program will contribute to the interdisciplinary and collaborative vision that was at the heart of the founding of FCAT as a faculty. Indeed, through advising we will encourage them to do precisely this. Second, even if a student were to construct a program entirely out of courses in Contemporary Arts, the program would be significantly interdisciplinary, given both that the approaches and methods used in many of the courses in the upper and lower divisions are interdisciplinary in nature and that the School for the Contemporary Arts is inherently interdisciplinary, offering programs in five arts and in art and culture studies. Finally, as with any major at SFU, students must satisfy the University's "Breadth" requirements and thus must take courses in a range of areas outside of their major.

We anticipate that this program will attract students from across Canada as well as internationally. The School is currently preparing plans for better promotion and publicity (including a revamped website), and the BA will benefit from these plans.

Sincerely,

Christopher Pavsek

SIMON FRASER UNIVERSITY

FACULTY OF COMMUNICATION, ART, AND TECHNOLOGY

FULL PROGRAM PROPOSAL

B.A. in Cinema Studies (Major, Minor, and Honours)

Executive Summary:

The program in Cinema Studies is designed for students interested in the study of the history and aesthetics of cinema and related moving image arts from the earliest beginnings of the medium in the late 19th century to the present. The course of studies will be forward-looking, linking the earliest experiments with the moving image and sound to contemporary digital media and their multiple applications. The program will permit students to draw on the interdisciplinary expertise of faculty from three schools in the Faculty of Communication, Art, and Technology as well as faculty in departments in the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences. In addition, it benefits from its adjacency to the BFA program in film, as well as other areas of Contemporary Arts.

With our move to downtown Vancouver and our residence in the Goldcorp Centre for the Arts, interest in the School is increasing and we would like to offer more opportunities for students to engage with the School outside of our traditional core studio offerings in art creation and performance. We see a BA in Cinema Studies (as a degree distinct from the BFA in Film which is a production-based major) and its Minor as an opportunity to expand access to our programs to a variety of students who are not necessarily interested in pursuing film production, but rather the study of cinema and moving images more generally.

As an acknowledged centre of film production in North America, Vancouver is an ideal location for a BA in Cinema Studies. The film area in the School for the Contemporary Arts already has strong connections to the local industry, and these connections will also benefit students in cinema studies as we further develop opportunities for experiential education and community engagement.

In addition to preparing students for the ever-growing realm of the creative economy, of which Vancouver is an acknowledged centre, it will provide students with the knowledge and critical acumen they need to address the suffusion of our lives with imagery and sounds of all sorts in the form of cinema, online imagery, televisual imagery and more. A critical understanding of the origins, meanings, uses, and influences of this pervasive presence in the contemporary world is essential for engaged citizenship today.

To this end, the curriculum is designed to provide students with both a solid core knowledge through a series of required lower division and upper division courses within the School for the Contemporary Arts as well as the flexibility to design a course of study that meets their particular interests through the selection of courses from a wide range of electives drawn from Contemporary Arts and the other departments participating in the program. While the core methodology will be broadly humanistic, incorporating historical, interpretive and theoretical approaches, students will be able to explore other methodologies as well in their elective courses in those departments whose faculty employ and teach different approaches to cinema and the related arts.

The program will be built upon a solid foundation of pre-existing courses in Contemporary Arts and other departments in the university. Required and optional courses for the degree will be drawn primarily from Contemporary Arts, Communication, SIAT, English, French, and Gender, Sexuality & Women's Studies (with which Contemporary Arts shares a joint faculty appointment). On occasion, and by permission, students may also count toward their major courses offered in other departments at SFU where cinema is taught.

In addition to the program's distinctive characteristics outlined in the Notice of Intent, we would also like to point out the uniqueness of the Honours BA in Cinema Studies which has equivalent requirements to the other Honours programs in the School for the Contemporary Arts. In addition to providing the opportunity for more intensive and comprehensive study of cinema and related arts, the Honours BA offers an opportunity for students to pursue interdisciplinary collaborations in other areas of study within the School.

Note: In response to feedback from SCUP, the Full Program Proposal differs from the original program as described in the Notice of Intent submitted to SCUP in 2009.

These changes include:

- the addition of a Minor in Cinema Studies. The Minor in Cinema Studies will replace the current Minor in Film and Video Studies, which will be discontinued. Separate notice of discontinuation will be submitted to Senate.
- the addition of an Honours Program in Cinema Studies. This program is designed to correspond to the other honours programs in the School for the Contemporary Arts and has equivalent requirements.
- the program will now be direct entry.

In addition, the following change has been made:

- anticipated start date is now September 2012.

Credentials to be awarded:

BA in Cinema Studies

BA in Cinema Studies with Honours
Minor in Cinema Studies

Program location: Contemporary Arts, SFU, Vancouver. Since the majority of faculty associated with the program are appointed in Contemporary Arts, this is its logical location.

Faculties, Departments and Schools offering courses in the program:

FCAT: Contemporary Arts; Communication; SIAT.

FASS: English; Gender, Sexuality and Women's Studies.

Admission to the program: Admission to the Major or Minor in Cinema Studies will be by direct entry.

To apply for entry into the Honours Program in Cinema Studies, students complete the same lower and upper division requirements as the major program. Students must have a minimum 3.5 GPA in courses for their major and a minimum 3.0 CGPA. To complete the program, 132 units are required, including the selection of listed courses, and maintenance of a minimum 3.5 GPA in upper-division courses chosen for the Honours Program.

Anticipated enrolment: We anticipate admitting 6 to 10 majors initially.

Anticipated program start date: September 2012 for students internal to SFU. January 2013 for students new to SFU.

Library impact: Since the BA is composed of courses that are already in the calendar, no additional library resources are needed.

Curriculum:

I. Student outcomes:

Students who complete the B.A. in Cinema Studies will have gained a comprehensive education in the field of humanistic inquiry into the study of cinema and related moving image arts. Students will graduate with a knowledge of the historical development of cinema as a medium, an art form, and an institution, from its earliest beginnings as a 19th-century screen entertainment to its most recent manifestations in the expanding and evolving realms of digital media. Students will also graduate with a sound knowledge of diverse methodologies of the study of cinema and moving images.

While the core methodology by which students will learn will be broadly humanistic, incorporating a range of historical, interpretive and theoretical approaches, in their elective courses students will be able to explore other methodologies in depth. Students will be able to take advantage of courses taught by faculty in Communication who work in a humanistic vein but also in the tradition of the social sciences and policy studies; and they will be able to take courses from faculty in SIAT who are expert in the technological and design elements of digital moving-image arts.

At the lower division, students will acquire core knowledge in required courses that will form the basis for exploring a variety of topics in lower- and upper-division electives. At the upper division, the three required courses will deepen students' theoretical understanding of cinema, provide greater exposure to the breadth of film traditions and history, and sustain a cohort experience amongst the students. The majority of courses in the upper division are electives, however, and this will allow students to tailor their program to their individual interests and needs.

2. Curricular requirements:

For the Major:

Basic SFU requirements for a B.A. degree will apply.

At the lower division level students will be required to take at least 21 units including two introductory core courses (FPA 136-3 and 137-3) and three 200-level classes (FPA 235-3, 236-3, and 237-3). 6 units of electives must also be taken.

At the upper division level, students must take at least 28 units of classes including FPA 335-4, 337-4, and 436-4, and one of 319W or 338W, as well as 13 units of electives.

For the Minor:

At the lower division level, students will complete 12 units, including FPA 136-3 and 137-3, and two of FPA 235-4, 236-3, or 237-3.

At the upper division level, students will complete a minimum of 18 units including 335-4, 337-4, and 436-4, as well as two upper-division electives.

For Honours:

Students must complete 132 units total. Requirements include 12 additional credits of upper-division courses over and above the requirements for the B.A. The Honours program is designed to correspond to the general requirements of the Honours programs in the other fields in the School for the Contemporary Arts.

No work experience/work place term is required for the degree. However, we are working to arrange Co-op education opportunities for interested students.

Appendix A provides a list of upper and lower division courses.

3. Course structure and class size:

Lower division courses include large lecture courses, most with tutorials, as well as smaller seminars. Upper division courses are primarily seminars ranging from 18 to 35 students.

Faculty:

The proposed BA in Cinema Studies is the result of work conducted by a steering committee made up of faculty from Communication, Contemporary Arts, and SIAT. Because the curriculum is composed of courses already in the calendar, no additional time beyond that already committed to the courses they already teach is required for the program. Faculty members committed to teaching in the program include:

Jim Bizzocchi, SIAT: Interactive Narrative, Poetics of the Moving Image, Video Art, Game Design, New Media.

Colin Browne, Contemporary Arts: Documentary & innovative film production; Canadian and documentary cinemas; poetry; fiction; screenplay; poetics; interdisciplinary performance; critical writing.

Zoë Druick, Communication: Cultural industries; documentary and reality-based media; media theory.

Peter Dickinson, English: Canadian cinema; queer cinema and theory.

Michael Filimowicz, SIAT: Electroacoustic Music, Experimental Video, Digital Photography, Sound Design, Creative Writing, Public Art.

Martin Gotfrit, Contemporary Arts: Electroacoustic music, film sound design, composition and scoring for film.

Patricia Gruben, Contemporary Arts: Canadian cinema; cinema studies; screenwriting and directing.

Helen Hok-Sze Leung, Gender, Sexuality & Women's Studies: Queer Cinema & Screen

Cultures; Queer Cultural Politics in Asia; Hong Kong Culture; Nationalisms and New Media in Sinophone Culture.

Jacqueline Levitin, Contemporary Arts and Gender, Sexuality and Women's Studies: Women's film; documentary film and media; film theory.

Laura Marks, Contemporary Arts: Film theory; Arab cinema and world cinema; new media and media art.

Christopher Pavsek, Contemporary Arts: European cinema; avant-garde and political cinema; film theory and critical theory.

Gaelle Planchenault, French: French cinema, literature, and popular culture.

In addition, other faculty members in these departments, as well as faculty from a number of other departments including Archaeology, History, Humanities and Sociology and Anthropology regularly teach courses of direct relevance and applicability to the major in cinema studies.

Appendix A: Detailed Program Requirements

Major: Students complete 49 units (out of SFU's general requirement of 120 units for a B.A. degrees) as specified below.

* Can be repeated as an elective if the topic of the course changes.

 Only when the topic is cinema/media/theory of relevance; prior approval required.

 Other courses devoted to film or video are occasionally offered by other departments. With prior permission, students may substitute one or more of these courses to fulfill requirements, up to a maximum of eight units. See the director of the Film BA or the undergraduate advisor for a current list of other related offerings.

*Please check the specific prerequisites for these courses before including them in your program.

Minor: Students complete 30 units (out of SFU's general requirement of 120 units for a B.A. degrees) as specified below.

At the lower division level, students will complete 12 units, including FPA 136-3 and 137-3, and two of FPA 235-3, 236-3 or 237-3.

At the upper division level, students will complete a minimum of 18 units including FPA 335-4, 337-4, and 436-4, as well as two upper-division electives to be chosen from the upper division course list for the major.

Honours: The Honours Program in Cinema Studies is designed to coordinate with the other Honours programs in the School for the Contemporary Arts and reflect the interdisciplinary nature of the School.

Student must complete the requirements for the BA in Cinema Studies plus:

12 upper division units including:

6 units in upper division courses from the list of elective courses for the major.

Plus the remaining necessary units to be drawn from courses listed below.
(Placement in courses is based on prerequisites and or permission from instructor.)

Appendix B: Related Programs at other post-secondary institutions in British Columbia.

One other undergraduate film studies BA degree is offered in British Columbia, a BA in Film Studies at UBC which is more conventionally disciplinary in its approach. The proposed BA in Cinema Studies at SFU, in keeping with the interdisciplinary nature of the School for the Contemporary Arts and the Faculty of Communication, Art and Culture, will offer a significant interdisciplinary component and will be taught by scholars of Cinema, Media, Art and Culture Studies, Digital Art, Art History, Interactive Technologies, and Communication as well as by scholar/filmmakers who bring to their teaching a practical understanding of production and post-production processes and the changing relationship between moving images, sound and technology.

Capilano University offers a Bachelor of Motion Picture Arts (BMPA) but its focus is almost exclusively on film and video production and includes almost no academic or humanistic study of cinema or related arts.

The University of Victoria offers a minor in Film Studies through its General Program. No major is offered.

Notice of Intent: B.A. in Cinema Studies

School for the Contemporary Arts

Simon Fraser University

May 10, 2009

Credential to be awarded: BA in Cinema Studies

Program location and justification:

The School for the Contemporary Arts at Woodward's.

Faculties, Departments and Schools offering the program:

FCAT: Contemporary Arts, Communication, SIAT

FASS: English

Anticipated program start date: September 2010

Description:

The goal of the BA in Cinema Studies degree is to offer a comprehensive, in-depth education in the expanding field of humanistic inquiry into cinema studies. The program will encompass twentieth and twentieth-first century developments in moving image studies; students will graduate with a knowledge of the historical development of cinema as a medium, an art form and an institution, from its inception through to its contemporary manifestations in expanding realms of digital media. Students will graduate with a sound knowledge of the theoretical methodologies associated with the study of cinema and an understanding of the social, cultural and political contexts in which cinema has developed since its emergence in the late 19th century.

Our aim is to bring together, in a single, coherent, innovative program, the diverse and interdisciplinary expertise of faculty with interests in cinema studies across the university.

Anticipated contribution to the mandate and strategic plan of the institution:

The proposed BA contributes in a number of ways to the university's strategic plan. Its innovative interdisciplinary nature not only supports a key initiative of the President's Agenda (2005-2009), which calls for increased interdisciplinarity, but also contributes to the advancement of interdepartmental collaboration envisioned by the new Faculty of Communication, Art and Technology, drawing as it does on faculty from Communication, SIAT and Contemporary Arts. It will take advantage of the already existing synergy between departments in the new faculty. In addition, the timing for this proposal could not be better, as it will be introduced during the first full year of Contemporary Arts occupation of the Woodward's building and will contribute to creating a new profile for the School.

This program is built upon and extends the School's longstanding role in the training and development of film artists. Vancouver is the third largest film production centre in North America. The proposed BA In Cinema Studies will reinforce the University's and the province's ongoing commitment to education in art, culture and society, and in the process will help support and further develop a cultural industry that is vital to the future of our region, our province and our nation.

Target Audience:

Students registering for the BA will be undergraduates from across Canada—and internationally—who are interested in the study of cinema from a historical and theoretical perspective. The program will interest students wishing to pursue careers in the arts as well as those wishing to pursue graduate study in the growing number of graduate programs in cinema studies, media studies and related fields. A BA in Cinema Studies is an asset to those working in the film and media industries, in national or provincial cultural agencies, film distribution and exhibition, film festival management and programming and governmental regulatory and policy-making bodies.

Content:

The degree will require a minimum of 21 units at the lower division and 28 at the upper division. The program will be built upon a solid foundation of pre-existing courses in Contemporary Arts and other departments in the university. Required and optional courses for the degree will be drawn from Contemporary Arts, English, Communication, SIAT and Women's Studies, and, on occasion, by permission, from courses devoted to cinema in other departments.

Delivery Methods:

Since the program is based upon existing courses, the standard delivery methods will be those already in place for on-campus education. Lecture/Lab/Tutorial will be used.

Linkages between learning outcomes and curriculum design:

The curriculum is designed to provide Film Majors with a common core curriculum as well as the freedom to design a program tailored to their specific interests.

No workplace term or work experience required.

Distinctive characteristics:

The BA in Cinema Studies, housed in FCAT with its core group of faculty in Contemporary Arts, will draw on the interdisciplinary strengths of the CA faculty. The program will offer students a unique opportunity to study cinema in the context of the other arts and media with which it emerged and with which it has been in constant dialogue throughout its more than 100 year history.

Drawing on faculty and courses in Communication, Contemporary Arts, FASS and SIAT, the program will expose students to a diverse set of approaches to the study of cinema. The adjacency to the multiple BFA programs in the School for the Contemporary Arts will provide a stimulating environment for students pursuing cinema studies, and the interaction between student filmmakers in the BFA Film program and their counterparts in the BA Cinema Studies program will enhance both programs.

Professional relationships with the Praxis Centre for Screenwriters, the Vancouver International Film Festival, the Pacific Cinémathèque Pacifique, the DOXA Documentary Film Festival and other film organizations exist at present, and we intend to strengthen these relationships in order to explore potential pedagogical links and student internships. The proximity to the offices of the National Film Board of Canada at Woodward's will further enhance our specialization in the cinemas of Canada.

Anticipated completion time:

Four years.

Enrolment plan for the length of the program:

Students may apply for entry into the BA in Cinema Studies program after completing FPA 136-3 The History and Aesthetics of Cinema I and FPA 137-3 The History and Aesthetics of Cinema II. A Coordinating Committee will screen all applicants and set the level and number of admissions per year. Initially, the number of students admitted will be limited, with an anticipated maximum number of 10 per year.

Policies on student evaluation (degree requirements):

As per general regulations of the University and FCAT.

Policies on faculty appointment (minimum qualifications):

Continuing faculty will hold a PhD or equivalent.

Policies on program assessment:

All academic units at SFU are subject to external review every six years.

Level of support and recognition from other post-secondary institutions (including plans for admission and transfer within BC) and relevant regulatory or professional bodies:

As per SFU's transfer credit procedures, students may transfer from BC colleges or universities to enroll into this program. There is no applicable regulatory or professional body for Cinema Studies in BC.

Evidence of student interest and labour market demand:

Student inquiries about a BA in Cinema Studies have increased markedly over the past few years. Enrolment in film courses is very high; we're often forced to turn students away. FPA 136 and FPA 137 have increased in size from 90 in 2005/6 to 162 for 2009/2010 and we anticipate further growth in the coming years with a goal of 300. Many of these students, we believe, would be interested in an opportunity to pursue a major in Cinema Studies.

In addition, we believe that the major will attract students to SFU who might otherwise not apply.

Cinema Studies students have the opportunity to pursue graduate study in the field at a growing number of graduate programs in film, media and cultural studies. The lower mainland offers multiple opportunities for employment in the arts and related fields.

Summary of resources required and available to implement the program:

We anticipate no additional resources or faculty to implement the program beyond those necessary for the continued maintenance of courses already offered. The program's curriculum consists entirely of courses already in the calendar.

Programs or associated resources that will be reduced or eliminated:

None.

List of faculty members:

The proposed BA in Cinema Studies is the result of work conducted by a steering committee made up of faculty from several departments. Faculty members committed to teaching in the program are:

Jim Bizzocchi, SIAT: Interactive Narrative, Poetics of the Moving Image, Video Art, Game Design, New Media.

Colin Browne, Contemporary Arts: Documentary & innovative film production; Canadian and documentary cinemas; poetry; fiction; screenplay; poetics; interdisciplinary performance.

Zöe Druick, Communication: Cultural institutions; documentary media; visual technologies; media and politics; discourse analysis; cultural theory.

Peter Dickinson, English: Canadian cinema; queer cinema and theory.

Related programs at SFU and other British Columbia post-secondary institutions:

One other undergraduate film studies degree is offered in British Columbia, a BA in Film Studies at UBC which is traditional in its approach. The proposed BA in Cinema Studies at SFU, in keeping with the nature of Contemporary Arts and FCAT, takes an expanded approach and will offer a significant interdisciplinary component and will be taught by scholars of Cinema, Media, Art and Culture Studies,

Digital Art, Art History, Interactive Technologies and Communication and as well as by scholar/filmmakers who bring to their teaching a practical understanding of production and post-production processes and the changing relationship between moving images, sound and technology.
