Course # EDUC 372-3

MAINSTREAMING STUDENTS WITH SPECIAL NEEDS

Victoria, B. C. August 2-6, 1988

Description:

This Institute, offered by a team of outstanding Canadian educators, will deal with the "why" and "how" of integrating any student into the regular school system, including people at risk of all ages: dropouts, street kids, or any group that has been missed by the educational system.

The Institute will provide training and practice in how to use the MAPS action planning system and the 'circle of friends' concept in designing community integrated settings. The class itself becomes a community in which people can truly explore their own values, goals and aspirations.

Instructors:

Dr. Marsha Forest and Mr. Jack Pearpoint

Location:

University of Victoria, Victoria, B. C.

Marsha Forest is Director of the Centre for Integrated Education in Toronto and the Director of Literacy Training for Frontier College. She is a professor at McGill University. Jack Pearpoint is President of Frontier College, Canada's oldest adult education institution. His area of expertise is in dealing with people at risk, and his "Beat the Street" program is making effective in-roads dealing with the issues and concerns surrounding street kids across Canada.
