SECONDARY LEARNING ASSISTANCE: TEACHING METHODS AND PRINCIPALS OF CURRICULUM ADAPTATION

Victoria, B. C. August 8-12, 1988

Description:

This Institute will examine the models for providing assistance to secondary students including: teacher-focused consulting; resource consulting; modification of the regular or mainstreamed classroom; and the resource classroom. It will explore the principles underlying these models, the type of youth who benefit from each, and what the research is saying about the effectiveness of each. Much of the class will be devoted to curriculum adaptation strategies for reading, writing, mathematics, thinking, listening and speaking.

Instructor:

Dr. Betty Epanchin

Location:

University of Victoria, Victoria, B. C.

Betty Epanchin is an Assistant Clinical Professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. In this position she is responsible for lecturing, supervising student teachers, and coordinating the training program for teachers of children with emotional and behavioural problems. She is a clinical case supervisor at Wright School, a laboratory school for handicapped children and youth.
