

Education 486-4 Drama in the Classroom

Instructor: Campbell Smith

Prince Rupert

Course Description:

The study of creative and developmental drama techniques for use in the classroom. Work to include introductory movement and voice, creative writing, theatre games, improvisation, mask making and mask work. Employing traditional myths and legends, in combination with original writings, a dramatic piece will be developed by the students for inclass presentation.

In addition to the practical study of drama techniques, the course will focus on individual creative development and expression.
