RE: Calendar Revisions to World Literature Major and Honours Program

DATE: February 10, 2012

At its meeting of April 13th, 2010, the World Literature Steering Committee approved the creation of WL 330-4: Special Topics in World Literature. FASSCC approved this course creation on July 5th, 2010.

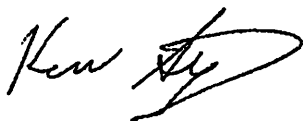

Further, at its meeting of December 1st, 2010, the World Literature Steering Committee approved the creation of two new Directed Readings courses: WL 340-1 and WL 345-2. FASSCC later approved these two courses on July 4th, 2011.

It was recently noted that these three courses have not yet been added to the university calendar under the Upper Division requirements section for the World Literature Major and Honours programs. The following document outlines the necessary calendar revisions to the Major and Honors Upper Division requirements for the calendar.

Would you please place this proposal on the agenda for the next meeting of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences Curriculum Committee.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

RE:	Proposal for Calendar Change

At its meeting of 10 April 2012, the Department of Political Science approved the attached calendar change for the course prerequisites for POL 201. The details are included in the attached material.

The change is intended to prune the list of previous courses which preclude a student from taking POL 201 for credit. POL 213 was a predecessor course to POL 201, but it was last offered so long ago that POL 201 has evolved and been updated sufficiently for any returning former student to benefit from taking POL 201. SA 255 used to be a course that we allowed as an alternative to the quantitative methods requirement for POL majors, but this is no longer the case. As a result we believe that those who have taken SA 255 should now take POL 201 (or IS 240) for credit as part of the POL major.

Would you be kind enough place this material on the agenda of the next meeting of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences Curriculum Committee?

RATIONALE

The intent is to simplify and update the list of previous courses which preclude a student taking POL 201 for credit. It has been many years since POL 213 has been offered, so it is no longer relevant. SA 255 is not considered as an alternative to the POL 201 requirement for the POL Majors; so if a student has taken SA 255 we would want them to take POL 201 for credit.

NEW COURSE PROPOSALS

BACKGROUND:

The SFU-Zhejiang University (ZU) Dual Degree Program (DDP) in Computing Science offers unique opportunities for students to study and acquire degrees in two universities. Mandarin Chinese is an essential part of the program, providing required language skills to live and study in China.

According to the Chinese language proficiency requirement set by China's Ministry of Education, and ZU's admission standard for international students, SFU DDP students are required to reach Level 4 on the HSK Chinese Proficiency Test in order to acquire a degree from ZU.

SFU students enter the DDP program from a variety of backgrounds, non-heritage and heritage. They exhibit a range of Chinese proficiency, from basic beginners to fluent speakers. Therefore, two series of nine courses have been developed and delivered in response to the distinct language learning needs of the students.

In addition, these courses complement and extend the existing Chinese language courses at SFU by offering intensive option and heritage course option.

COURSES:

Courses for non-heritage students:

CHIN 180-3 Intensive Mandarin Chinese for Beginners I
CHIN 181-3 Intensive Mandarin Chinese for Beginners II
CHIN 280-3 Intensive Mandarin Chinese for Beginners III
CHIN 281-3 Intensive Mandarin Chinese for Beginners IV
CHIN 182-3 Mandarin Chinese Conversation

Courses for heritage students:

CHIN 190-3 Heritage Mandarin Chinese I
CHIN 191-3 Heritage Mandarin Chinese II
CHIN 290-3 Heritage Mandarin Chinese III
CHIN 291-3 Heritage Mandarin Chinese IV

CHIN 180 set courses have been offered as Special Topic courses since fall 2005. CHIN 190 set courses have been offered as Special Topic courses since fall 2007. With SFU's commitment to the SFU-ZU DDP program, as well as the growing demand of Chinese courses on campus, it is timely and important to grant these courses regular status.

RATIONALE for Intensive Mandarin Chinese courses for non-heritage beginners:

1. Support the SFU-ZU Dual Degree Program

In order for non-heritage SFU DDP students to be successful in meeting the language proficiency requirement of the DDP program, an intensive learning experience is required. Students with no prior knowledge of Chinese are required to complete the five courses listed above (altogether 15 credits) at SFU before they begin their study at ZU. These courses provide students with a comprehensive and fast-paced study experience to improve their listening, speaking, reading and writing skills in Chinese language in two semesters, and prepare them for further Chinese immersion courses at ZU.

To date, the success rate of passing HSK 4 is 100%. All the SFU DDP students who have undertaken the intensive Chinese courses have achieved the required Chinese Proficiency level, and some even reached a higher standard.

2. Support SFU's Study Abroad Exchange program to China

This suite of courses is open to all SFU students; hence they attract students who plan to spend one or two semesters on an exchange program in one of SFU's partner universities, such as Tsinghua University, Zhejiang University or National Taiwan Normal University. The intensity of the courses provides students with the necessary language skills and cultural knowledge, as well as over-all confidence to participate effectively in the exchange program in a short period of time.

3. Expand SFU's Chinese language offerings

CHIN 180, 181, 280, 281 are the only intensive Chinese courses offered at SFU. CHIN 182 is the only course on campus focusing on speaking skill for non-heritage students. These courses complement the other Mandarin language courses on campus, which provide non-intensive courses for beginners. The intensive suite of courses recognizes the clear interests of students in fostering connection with China, and allows them to build basic language skills quickly in order to function successfully in Chinese environments.

RATIONALE for Heritage Mandarin Chinese course:

1. Support the SFU-ZU Dual Degree Program

DDP has attracted Chinese heritage students since the very first cohort. The majority of the students in this group have an imbalance in their Chinese language skills. They have a strong verbal communication capacity, and a very limited knowledge of written Chinese. The Heritage Mandarin Chinese Courses are designed for this group of students to improve their communicative competence, especially in reading and writing. Students achieve satisfactory results in their Chinese Proficiency Test with the help of these courses.

2. Expand SFU's Chinese language offerings

SFU has a significant Chinese heritage student population. The Heritage Mandarin Chinese courses meet their language learning needs. Therefore, the courses have had strong enrolment since they were first offered to all SFU students in 2008. For example, all the four courses got full class (25 students) from fall 2008 to spring 2010. CHIN 290 and 291 usually have students in wait list for enrolment.

Together with the non-heritage Mandarin Chinese courses (CHIN 100-201), SFU now offers a comprehensive array of Chinese courses for students with various ethnic backgrounds, language levels and learning experiences.

RESOURCE:

The School of Computing Science has committed its support for the SFU-ZU DDP program as well as these language courses. A continuing full time DDP Chinese language lecturer position has been created in the School since May 2011.

RATIONALE FOR INTRODUCTION OF THIS COURSE

This course is developed and offered in response to the Mandarin Chinese learning needs of non-heritage students in SFU-ZU Dual Degree Program (DDP) in Computing Science. It provides students with a comprehensive and fast-paced study experience to improve their language skills and prepare them for the study in China.

There is considerable interest in this course among non DDP students who plan to join SFU's Study Abroad exchange programs to China. Its intensity provides students with the necessary language skills, cultural knowledge, as well as over-all confidence to participate effectively in the exchange programs.

This course expands SFU's Chinese language offerings. It complements the existing non-intensive Mandarin Chinese courses for non-heritage beginners.

COURSE CONTENT

This course is a continuation of CHIN 180-3. With communicative classroom activities and on-line practices/exercises, the course seeks to help students develop basic skills in listening, speaking, reading and writing in Chinese. By the end of the course, students are expected to be able to conduct daily conversation in simple Chinese, and to read and write with an active vocabulary of over 450 characters. Classes meet 8 hours a week for six weeks.

COURSE CONTENT

This course is designed for non-heritage learners who have completed their 100 level comprehensive Chinese courses, i.e. studied Pinyin, understood basic sentence structures and learned about 400 basic Chinese characters. The course aims to enhance students' oral skills by: 1) presenting more vocabulary and constructions; 2) providing various speaking exercises for authentic daily topics; and 3) introducing Chinese communication styles. After-class speaking activities with native speakers of Chinese are encouraged.

RE Deletion of B-Hum designation for EXPL 145W

DATE May 30, 2012

TIME 12:02 PM

The Explorations Program has formally requested removal of the B-Hum designation attached to EXPL 145W, effective Fall 2012 term.

The program has indicated that due to the Special Topics nature of the course, and the change in instructors over time, the course is no longer consistently offered with a Humanities focus, but has shifted lately to Social Science. Rather than constrict the content with a specific B type, the program would prefer to focus on the W pedagogy, no matter the instructor or course content.

Based on this rationale, the University Curriculum Office approves the removal of the B designation for EXPL 145W. The Explorations Program offers other B-Hum and B-Soc designated courses within its course list.

FASS Associate Dean Paul Budra has approved the program's request.
