COURSE DESCRIPTION

Semester to be offered:

This course is being offered during the 2003-3, 2004-1, and 2004-2 semesters for only PDP students enrolled in the International Teacher Education Module (ITEM). The course incorporates assignments undertaken during the pre-PDP semester, 2003-2, 2004-1 and uses semester 2004-2 to consolidate all of the assignments completed during the previous semesters.

Description of Course:

This course is based both on practical and theoretical orientations to international and intercultural education, including perspectives on the relationships between culture, learning and schooling. The overall approach to the course is twofold. It examines the relationships between culture, learning and schooling from an intercultural orientation and it examines contemporary issues in teacher education from an international perspective.

This course surveys:

1. methods for development of culturally sensitive and culturally responsive teaching practices and curricula;
2. principles and practices in international education from a global and development education perspective;
