Subject PSYC Calendar Changes, Effective Summer 2024

Date July 5, 2023

Dear George,

By request of the Department of Psychology Graduate Chair, I have approved the attached amendments to calendar changes by delegated authority. This involves the removal of PSYC 770 as a prerequisite for PSYC 880 (practicum). PSYC 770 has been moved from the MA to the PhD program requirements, this change was approved and effective in Summer 2023. However, removing PSYC 770 as a prerequisite for PSYC 880 was missed in the original calendar change request and approval. This change is simply to align with the original calendar change as PSYC 880 remains in the MA program. Kind regards,

Kate Slaney

Course Subject/Number	PSYC 880	Units	3	Effective Term and Year	Summer 2024
Course Title	Junior Practicum
Rationale for Change:	PSYC 770 is no longer a requirement in the clinical psychology master's program as it was moved to the clinical psychology PhD program requirements back in Summer 2023. PSYC 880 is taken in the master's program, therefore we are removing PSYC 770 as a prerequisite.

Description A fundamentally human pursuit, games provide a vital window into human nature. Through understanding what motivates people and what constitutes "fun" we can create more meaningful and engaging experiences in all areas of digital and interactive media. This course explores game design from both a theoretical and applied standpoint. We will explore the various aspects of games – from "indie" to "triple A" titles - including mechanics, emotion, agency, balance, motivation and the process of making games (plan, build, test and repeat!). It's important to note that game design principles can be applied in ALL areas of digital media. The course will consist of graduate level seminars and game deconstructions. Students will be expected to participate in classroom activities, and should show up prepared (having completed any necessary readings, or consumed any relevant media requested). Throughout the course of the semester, students will deconstruct the design of existing games using the principles taught in class, complete individual and/or team-based assignments, and deliver a final team-based (5-6 students) comprehensive game-design document and accompanying digital game prototype. The course is capped by a final class presentation of each team's project.	Description Game Design and Gamification explores what motivates people, what constitutes "fun", and how through these principles we can create more meaningful and engaging experiences. Primarily, we will focus on video games, ranging from indie to AAA, mobile to VR, to understand the core concepts of game design and discuss how these can be applied to other interactive forms through gamification. We will cover various aspects of games including mechanics, emotion, agency, balance, and player motivation through practical in-class activities, game deconstructions, and projects. In these projects, students will work in teams to design, prototype, and test their own games, with a focus on user-centred design and iteration. Projects will be iterative, with multiple rounds of feedback and revision, and will culminate in a final presentation where students will present their games to the class and invited guests.

FROM Nancy Forde, Graduate Program Chair, Physics

RE Minor course change, Phys 846

DATE June 1, 2023

I am writing regarding a minor change to the course PHYS 846, “Nonlinear Physics” that is offered in the Department of Physics. The change is to remove pre-requisites for the course. Currently, the required pre-requisite is PHYS 384, “Methods of Theoretical Physics”, a third year course on mathematical methods in Physics. The rationale for removing the pre-requisite is two-fold:

- 1) Most graduate students in the Department of Physics did not complete their undergraduate education at SFU and hence have not taken PHYS 384, leading to additional administrative work to register them in the course.
- 2) Students who have been admitted to the graduate program in Physics have usually covered material essentially equivalent to PHYS 384 as part of their undergraduate degree.

Hence, the pre-requisite serves no useful purpose, and the department has voted to eliminate it.
