Graduate Curriculum Changes

EDUC 870-4 Theories of Counselling (prerequisite change)

EDUC 862-4 Individual Assessment in Counselling (prerequisite change)

Rationale for Prerequisite Changes

Both EDUC 862 and EDUC 870 build on undergraduate coursework in counselling psychology, voluntary experiences, and clinical capacity demonstrated through interviews by all students admitted to the counselling program.

These changes clarify to students from outside the Counselling Psychology program that these are specialized core courses in a highly-sequenced program.

It also allows the instructor to review a specific non-program student request, which may have equal or greater coursework and experience, for possible acceptance to one of the core courses.

On-line calendar Dec 8/10

EDUC 862-4 Individual Assessment in Counselling

Assessment procedures used in educational and community counselling settings, including intake assessment, case conceptualization, observational procedures, diagnostic categories, ethics, bias and multicultural and diversity issues.

EDUC 870-4 Theories of Counselling

Students examine analytic, phenomenological, existential, behavioral and cognitive approaches to counselling, and the philosophical and personality theories upon which they are based.
