July 4 - August 12<sup>3</sup>
Mondays & Wednesdays, 8:30 - 11:50 A. M.
Location: MPX 8620

Instructor: D. Selby

---

PREREQUISITE: Education 401/402 or equivalent.

The course will explore the theory of global education through key concepts such as the interdependence of lands and peoples, the interlocking nature of global issues, the interconnectedness of past, present and future and the relationship between personal and planetary development. Various related educational initiatives will be addressed such as development education, environmental education, futures education, education for gender and race equality, human rights education and peace education. The course will have a strong practical orientation with an emphasis on active participation.

EDUCATION 487

Special Topics: Global Education: Teaching Approaches

Summer Session 1988
July 4 - August 12<sup>3</sup>
Mondays and Wednesdays,
12:30 - 2:00 P. M. - MPX 7618
Mondays and Wednesdays,
2:10 - 4:50 P. M., MPX 8620

Instructor: G. Pike

---

The course will explore the relationship between global education and interactive, participatory learning approaches. After an introduction to learning style theories and their implications for the classroom, the course will consider the following topics: global education and child development, affirmation and empowerment, co-operative learning, experiential learning, developing communicative skills, action-oriented learning, feedback and evaluation strategies, the rhythm of courses, the teacher as facilitator and the whole-school implications of the learning process in global education.

PRECOURSE READING:

For pre-course reading, we would suggest course members read Earthrights by D. Selby, S. Grieg, and G. Pike, published by World Wildlife Fund/Kogan Page (1987).

REQUIRED TEXT:

Fisher & Hicks, World Studies 8-13: A Teacher's Handbook published by Oliver & Boyd (1985).
