Academic Discipline Report - 2007

In 2007 an Academic Integrity Coordinator was appointed and a centralized data base was initiated in the Registrar's office to track incidents of academic dishonesty. The data base was not implemented until summer of 2007 so the information listed below may not be complete.

Between March and December 2007, 119 cases were recorded in the Registrar's office. The centralized data base allowed for the identification of one repeat offender and two students who applied for a withdrawal (W.E.) from courses in which they had been found to have committed academic dishonesty.

Type of Incident:	No. of Cases:
Copied work from another student	32

FROM Tim Rahilly, Ph.D., Senior Director Student & Community Life
RE Annual report of Student Conduct, October 31, 2006 – November 1, 2007
DATE December 24, 2007

The Code of Student Conduct (Policy Number T10.01) exists to create a scholarly community characterized by honesty, civility, diversity, free inquiry, freedom from harassment, mutual respect and individual safety. The policy covers SFU student conduct in university-related activities (i.e., activities operated under University auspices at any location).

The procedures for student misconduct are outlined in SFU Policy T10.03. As per the Policy, reports of student misconduct are forwarded to the Senior Director, Student & Community Life who will give the student the opportunity to meet and discuss the situation and may take one or more of the following courses of action:

- a. seek an informal resolution;
- b. recommend professional assistance with the intention of assisting the student;
- c. issue a formal reprimand;
- d. assess and recover costs to rectify the damage or loss caused by the student;
- e. require the student to write a letter of apology;
- f. allow the student to perform up to 50 hours of community service;
- g. terminate scholarships or other financial support;
- h. refer the matter to the UBSD.

Attached is a summary table for cases of student misconduct seen by my office from October 31st 2006 to November 1st, 2007. I wish to draw your attention to some changes in the reporting format that I have implemented since taking over this duty in the Fall of 2006. Previous reports included a number of cases where the student was not seen. I have only included those cases where we have met with the student. Previous reports included:

1. Cases of theft from the bookstore where the student was issued a letter indicating the matter would be kept on file.
2. Cases where complaints were initiated but the complainer was unwilling to go on record regarding the matter.
3. Cases involving mental health concerns where an immediate referral was made but there was no follow up with regard to the perceived misconduct.

It is important to keep these changes in reporting in mind when reviewing the statistics as it may appear that we have had a decline in cases of misconduct; this is not the case. You may also note that I have indicated the category of actions taken as per the those outlined in T10.03. I have only chosen informal resolution in those cases where the student has demonstrated remorse for their actions and clearly understands how to avoid similar incidents in the future.

I would like to share some general observations with Senate with regard to this important topic.

- The vast majority of cases of misconduct involve use of alcohol. Incidents of property damage and violence are strongly associated with activities such as Pub Night and activities where a Special Occasion License (alcohol) has been issued.
- It is evident that in several cases of misconduct, the student's perceptions and thinking is compromised by mental health issues. While there have been cases where the misconduct clearly stems from diminished mental health, several other cases have involved, to some extent, mental health issues.
- This year, several complaints were made with regard to the on-line conduct of students on social networking sites such as Facebook. Based on our policy framework, many stakeholders believe that this is beyond the jurisdiction of the Policy. While this may be the case, I have followed up on the complaints outside the policy framework. For example, I have met with students to review the complaint and attempted to sensitize them to the effects of their conduct.

The attached table indicates the sanctions imposed in each case. Below, the chart indicates the broad categories of the cases dealt with during the past year.

I hope that the information provided helps the community understand this important and complex issue.

Respectfully Submitted,

Tim Rahilly
