MEMORANDUM

ATTENTION Senate Committee for University Priorities DATE October 9, 2014
FROM Norbert H. Haunerland, Associate Vice- PAGES 1/1
President Research
RE: Centre and Institute Report 2014/2015

As specified under SFU Policy R 40.01 "Research Centres and Institutes," I am pleased to submit to the Senate Committee for University Priorities (SCUP) the annual report on the activities of the Research Centres/Institutes. A copy of the Policy is also attached for your reference.

The report covers primarily the fiscal year 2014/2015. It consists of two parts: a description of each Centre covered under the Policy, and a table showing the status of each Centre in several important areas. In addition, information on Research Centres/Institutes that were established since the end of fiscal year 2014/2015 are included.

Centres are divided into two categories, according to the Policy:

- Research Centres are under the direct authority of the Faculty Deans. The Deans report to the Vice President Research on the Centres under their authority. The enclosed status report indicates the degree to which the reports of the Centres are found by the Dean to be adequate.
- Research Institutes either have a university-wide mandate or comprise multi-university consortia in which SFU participates. The Vice-President, Research is responsible for these Institutes. These are also included in the status report.

As requested by the Senate Committee on University Priorities on November 23, 2011, included in the Status Report is the renewal date of each Research Centre/Institute.

The annual reports were prepared online for the eighth time, the full reports can be viewed in the office of the Vice-President, Research.

Please forward the report to Senate and the Board of Governors for information.

Norbert Haunerland, Associate Vice-President Research

Faculty of Education

Centre for Education, Law and Society	Space	CELS is located at Surrey SFU, room 5288. This single office houses the CELS Coordinator, our part-time Administrator and our Research Assistants, as well as our files and resources. This location provides access to Faculty of Education colleagues down the hall and to the Surrey School District and other school districts south of the Fraser. The Faculty of Education provides support and space to CELS, but no direct funding.

	Personnel	The University does not provide staff to CELS. The part-time CELS staff and researchers are funded through the CELS Endowment and project-specific grants. We do, however, access the expertise of the technology personnel in Education Central in the FOE, the FOE Budget office, Financial Services and other personnel in the FOE and University.
	Equipment	We purchased our own computer and printer with CELS funds. The office furniture is provided by the University, and we have access to the fax and photocopier machine in the Faculty of Education area.
	Funds	The work of CELS is funded through the CELS endowment, plus project-specific grants. The major contributors to the endowment are the Law Foundation of BC, The Real Estate Foundation, the Notary Foundation, the Simons Foundation, as well as several law firms and private donors. The endowment (principal, re-capitalization) is managed by the university. The CELS Endowment stands at close to 1.5 million, of which 43,111 (this past fiscal year) was allocated to operational expenses, including the part-time salaries of the Coordinator, the CELS Administrator and Research Assistants. The Endowment also funds a two-course release ($24,000) for the Director, allowing her to manage the work of CELS and develop new initiatives. CELS' funding also comes from project specific grants. For example, we received $20,000 for SRS at SFU to work with them on anti-bullying projects and research into workplace bullying. We also received 3,534 from several individuals in support of our film on Dr. Isidore Starr.
Centre for Research on Early Child Health and Education (CRECHE)	Space	We have recently been assigned a space by the Dean of the Faculty of Education to support research, student, and community engagement at CRECHE. This space consists of 2 faculty offices, an area to meet families or to have meetings, a quiet room to conduct experimental research, space for students to work on research and community projects and a meeting room for students that contains a frig, sink and small table. The area is also sufficient to allow for data storage.

Simon Fraser University-Zhejiang University Joint Centre on Big Data (JCBD) Research

Director: Jian Pei PhD (SFU) Canada Research Chair in Big Data Science, 778.782.6851 Tel; 778.782.3045 Fax; jpei@cs.sfu.ca

The purpose of creating the Simon Fraser University (SFU)-Zhejiang University (ZJU) Joint Centre on Big Data research is to provide a forum for faculty scholars and students from both institutions to advance big data science research in Canada and China.

The research centre is timely and it will strengthen ties between SFU's School of Computing Science and ZJU's College of Computer Science and Technology and School of Software Technology as the 10-year anniversary of the SFU-ZJU Dual Degree Program in Computing Science approaches in 2015. The Dual Degree Program is a flagship international initiative of SFU and ZJU. This new initiative also aligns with SFU's international engagement strategy for developing deeper and mutually beneficial relationships with selected countries identified in the International Strategic Plan.

The SFU-ZJU Joint Centre on Big Data research (JCBD) will foster research collaborations in big data science, champion training of graduate students and connect research with industry applications. Big data applications are wide-reaching, with potential for innovations in the environment, health sciences, medicine, engineering, business, social sciences and humanities and other disciplines.

JCBD will strengthen SFU's leadership position in big data research by providing a formal international linkage with one of China's leading academic institutions. In addition to exchanges, SFU researchers will access data mining labs located at ZJU in Hangzhou, China. ZJU researches will gain access to data in SFU's big data labs, such as the Data Mining and Database Lab, the Computer Graphics Lab, the Computer Networks Lab, the Machine Learning Lab, the High-Performance Computing Laboratory and Vancouver Institute for Visual Analytics Laboratory. Furthermore, the Computing Science's Graduate Dual Degree Program (GDDP) and the newly launched Professional Master's Program in Big Data will complement the education objectives of JCBD.

Centre for Global Workforce Strategy

Director: Mila B Lazarova M.S., Ph.D. (Rutgers) International Business Masters (Univ. Nat'l & World Econ., Bulgaria), 778.782.7709 Tel; awc13@sfu.ca, <http://business.sfu.ca/cgws/>

The Centre for Global Workforce Strategy will carry out multidisciplinary research on issues surrounding effective work force management strategies. It will initially consolidate the activities of three ongoing multinational research projects.

The first project, The Cultural Intelligence Project, involves participants from 12 countries in defining, developing, and validating an instrument to measure Cultural Intelligence – the measure of an individual's ability to interact effectively with the cultural aspects of an environment. It is a key competency requirement for the management of cultural diversity.

The second project is Canadian participation in Cranet (the Cranfield Network on Comparative Human Resource Management). Established in 1989, Cranet is an expanding group of top business schools and academic institutions collaborating to provide unique and rigorous data on human resource management practices across the world. Researchers carry out a regular international survey of organizational policies and practices and provide benchmarks for a systematic comparative analysis of trends in HRM policies and practices. Cranet is a unique resource for researchers, management practitioners, and policy makers, seeking an up-to-date overview of HR management's ever-changing global face.

The third project involves the study of bicultural individuals in organizations. Given the changing patterns in the world's workforce it is increasingly possible that more employees and managers will be bicultural. Bicultural individuals have a dual pattern of identification with different cultures. The ability of biculturals to operate within more than one culture as a native raises a number of interesting and important questions for global workforce management. As the Centre develops additional themes within the overall mandate of the Centre will be added.

Other Centre activities will include: • Practitioner forums, media outreach, and academic conferences • Publication in traditional scholarly venues • Preparation and distribution of educational material for use by universities and professional associations • Outreach and networking activities, such as the hosting conferences or public forums on topical subjects, and workshops to promote the activities and findings of the Centre to both academic and business audiences • Regular offerings of professional development programs

The CPCC has supported and held events for researchers (including students and faculty) and practitioners; artists and community organizers; policy makers and professionals to discuss, share and produce knowledge, plans and methodologies regarding issues concerning their research projects, their organizations' projects and their networks. The CPCC events have sought to raise issues, challenging and questioning dominant paradigms in order to support innovative approaches to studies of and projects involving culture and communities. While continuing to foster community links and policy research the CPCC has set up and supported cross-disciplinary and cross-organizational dialogues, events, collaborations and partnerships for events and projects and has expanded in the areas of diaspora/migration/transnational issues; Indigenous issues; artistic practice & knowledge production; innovative methodologies, highlighting the feminist, queer, diasporic and intersectional approaches of its members.

Sustainable community development aims to integrate economic, social and environmental objectives in community development. Sustainable community development is based on a consideration of the relationship between economic factors and other community elements such as housing, education, the natural environment, health, accessibility and the arts. SCD has emerged as a compelling alternative to conventional approaches to development, a participatory, holistic and inclusive process that leads to positive, concrete changes in communities by creating employment, reducing poverty, restoring the health of the natural environment, stabilizing local economies, and increasing community control. The SFU Centre for Sustainable Community Development (CSCD), formerly the Community Economic Development Centre, was founded in 1989. The Centre's mission is to support the sustainable development of communities through education, research and community mobilization; it provides research, training and advisory services throughout BC and Canada as well as internationally. The CSCD offers an undergraduate certificate and post-baccalaureate diploma (also available through distance education), graduate support, and two non-credit professional programs.

Co-operative Resource Management Institute

Director: Sean Cox BSc (Massachusetts, Lowell), MSc, PhD (Br Col), 778.782.5778 Tel, 778.782.4968 Fax; spxox@sfu.ca, <http://www.rem.sfu.ca/crmi>

The Cooperative Resource Management Institute (CRMI) is a unit on the Burnaby campus that houses personnel from natural resource management agencies. The Institute can facilitate solutions to difficult multidisciplinary issues in resource management by providing an environment where personnel from different management agencies such as forestry, fisheries, and wildlife can work side-by-side along with Simon Fraser University faculty, graduate students, post-doctoral fellows, and research associates on a daily basis. The university benefits from greater concentration of expertise in environmental management on campus and from new opportunities and funding for multidisciplinary, collaborative research programs. Graduate students and other young scientists also gain valuable experience working with agency scientists. The agencies involved with the Institute benefit from cooperative work with SFU researchers, often on topics that would otherwise not have been investigated due to staff shortages in the agencies. The Institute has thereby proven to be an excellent example of the classic "win-win" situation.

Tel; robert_hogg@sfu.ca, https://www.sfu.ca/fhs/news-events/news/year/2014/CANOC_Collaborative_Research_Centre

The HIV/AIDS Research Centre (HRC) aims to bring together researchers, students (including undergraduate, graduate, and postdoctoral), community partners and community investigators to build and expand research programs that address three major research themes:

- 1) Access to and quality of health services for individuals living with HIV, specifically how different supportive service models of care impact survival and HAART uptake, adherence, and retention;
- 2) Clinical research, particularly related to highly-active anti-retroviral therapy (HAART) and its associated outcomes with a focus on how long-term HAART affects aging and aging-related co-morbidities, and
- 3) HIV among key affected populations, specifically looking at outcomes among vulnerable or hard-to-reach populations (persons of Aboriginal ancestry, people who inject drugs, transgender individuals, women, and men who have sex with men). All research themes are guided by the vision of community-engaged HIV research, which focuses on the process of linking research, practice, policy and the lived experience of people living with HIV to improve the health and well being of individuals and communities affected by HIV.

The Centre will focus on research and community engagement in HIV/AIDS treatment and prevention. Notably, it will bring together SFU and BC Centre for Excellence in HIV/AIDS (BC-CfE) researchers, students, and community members to engage in important research and outreach activities.

Building on the strengths of world-renowned researchers who investigate a variety of behavioral, sensory-motor, cognitive, and neurophysiological phenomena, the BCNI focuses on a broad range of topics related to the neurobiological mechanisms underlying attention, perception, sensory integration, language, memory and action in health and disease. The major emphases is on using structural and functional brain imaging and behavioral/clinical assessments, for better understanding the underlying "Human Cognitive Brain Network in Health and Disease", the brain's network connectivity and dynamics among local and large-scale networks relating to cognitive human brain functions, and its alterations in cognitive disabilities, neurological and psychiatric symptoms. The goal is to develop objective "quantitative diagnostic markers and strategies" translating into better pedagogical applications and more specific cognitive, pharmacological and surgical interventional therapies. Among other outcomes of this approach, learning environments can become more inclusive and exciting places, learners gain a deeper, more lasting, and more flexible grasp of subject matter, and educators develop new skills, energy, and inspiration. The Centre coordinates both the Imaginative Education Research Group at Simon Fraser University (SFU), and the International Research Network on Imaginative Education, which involves researchers around the world. It also provides publications, workshops, and other materials and services to educators in the field. The Centre is managed by a steering committee drawn from the academic community at Simon Fraser University, with guidance from an Advisory Board whose members come from a wide range of professional and social backgrounds. The Centre also has developed some specific new programs with their own webpages and publications, such as "learning in Depth," "Whole School Projects," and "Dividing the School in Two."

Chronic Pain Research Institute

Director: Diane Gromala BFA (Michigan) 1982 MFA (Yale) 1990 Ph.D (Plymouth) 2007, 778.782.8013 Tel; gromala@sfu.ca, <http://www.sfu.ca/vpresearch/centres/Chronic%20Pain%20Research%20Institute.html>

As a long-term, degenerative syndrome that has come to be recognized as a disease in its own right, chronic pain is a complex phenomenon that affects at least 7 million Canadians, by conservative estimates. Chronic pain costs society, governments and families more than cancer, heart disease and HIV combined. It is a leading reason for doctor, hospital and emergency room visits, and has high rates of disability. Chronic pain must be controlled and managed by attending to the sufferer's biological, psychological and social needs. The need for this complexity of care was recognized when chronic pain was first described following World War II in a method now termed the biopsychosocial approach. Thus, expertise from a number of disciplines is needed to address these aspects. To this end, the Chronic Pain Research Institute proposed in this document aims to bring together researchers, practitioners, sufferers ("knowledge experts") and caregivers in an dynamic environment that enables the exploration of multiple avenues of research, management and control of chronic pain. These avenues include technology and media development to address the psychological, social and biological aspects of chronic pain, as well as research methods and practices from evidence-based medicine, as well as methods from the humanistic and artistic domains to address the cultural aspects. Training and analyses of clinical practice are promising ways that may help create capacity for our health care system that is currently overwhelmed by the sheer demand. With our non-profit partners, advocacy will help educate the public and reduce the stigma often experienced by those who live with chronic pain.

The purpose of the Indigenous Research Institute is (1) to promote research in areas related to Indigenous peoples — in particular, the Aboriginal peoples of Canada — and in a larger context, those of the global community, and (2) to facilitate community-based projects with Indigenous partners. The Institute will promote research by bringing together the expertise of Indigenous individuals, groups, and organizations with that of the academic community, to engage in work that meets goals and objectives that is specified by and meaningful to both Indigenous and academic individuals and groups. A meaningful aspect of this process will be the facilitation of communication between Indigenous individuals/communities and the university. The Institute will also promote collaborative research projects within the university and will seek and support internal and external funding for the promotion and pursuit of such research.

Institute for Canadian Urban Research Studies

The Institute is intended to further multidisciplinary research on urban issues. More specifically, its objectives are: to provide a focus for research about urban problems and issues in Canada; to promote interdisciplinary collaboration and research; to provide an institutional focus for international scholarship concerning urban problems; to provide a facility in which data for the study of urban problems can be collected, catalogued, and made readily accessible through modern data management; and to provide a facility in which research and techniques can be made available to those having a responsibility for policy. The focus has evolved into an emphasis on public urban safety and security as well as vulnerability and risk. This focus is supported with memoranda of understanding (MOU) between Simon Fraser University and several government ministries. The primary university/government MOU is with the Ministry of Justice including a formal research protocol with "E" Division of the RCMP. Under this MOU, ICURS engages in developing innovative and evidence-based approaches to advancing public safety research, in general, and crime reduction, in particular.

Institute for Diaspora Research and Engagement (IDRE)

Director: James Busumtwi-Sam Associate Professor International Relations and Comparative Development B.A. (Hons.) (University of Ghana), M.A. (University of Brock), Ph.D. (University of Toronto) Chair, Department of Political Science, 778.782.3729 Tel; diaspora@sfu.ca, <http://www.sfu.ca/diaspora-institute.html>

The Institute for Diaspora Research & Engagement (IDRE) is constituted as a research Institute at Simon Fraser University (SFU). SFU's Senate formally approved the Institute in April 2013, and it was officially launched on April 25, 2014. Diaspora literally means a dispersal of peoples. The Institute's working understanding of the concept includes "individuals and groups, with a history of migration, whose attachment to two or more locations within or across national boundaries is expressed through organized activities, connections and networks."

The creation of IDRE was in response to: • Public request for SFU to continue its successful engagement of diasporic communities. • The growing interest in diaspora among researchers and students at SFU and at other academic institutions, as well as among leaders and practitioners in the public, private non-profit and private for profit sectors who seek to engage diaspora more effectively, also strongly influenced the Institute's creation. • Alignment with SFU's Strategic Vision "to be the leading engaged university defined by its dynamic integration of innovative education, cutting-edge research and far-reaching community engagement," and SFU's Strategic Research Plan that guides the University "in responding effectively to the changing environment in research opportunities ... and promotes SFU's research strengths to government, community partners, and funding organizations."

The IDRE was created to promote interdisciplinary research and link that research with community engagement, capacity-building and education by: 1. Conducting and coordinating interdisciplinary scholarly and community-based research on diaspora, and provide research-related services to diasporic communities and others interested in diaspora; 2. Incubating diaspora social innovation by offering three core services: capacity-building, advisory services, and channeling funding to seed or scale-up diaspora-driven initiatives; and, 3. Serving as a knowledge hub to mobilize and exchange research and experiences among diaspora individuals and groups, researchers, and the wider public. It also links diaspora to research, project opportunities, and to social innovation.

Institute for Intersectionality Research and Policy

Director: O. Hankivsky BA (Tor), MA, PhD (W.Ont) , 778.782.5182 Tel, 778.782.5288 Fax; oah@sfu.ca <http://www.sfu.ca/iirp>

The Institute for Intersectionality Research & Policy (IIRP) anchors a vibrant interdisciplinary community of over 100 scholars, researchers and students. Its objectives and foci support the University's strategic research plan in the areas of i) health, genomics and physiological sciences and ii) history, culture, social relations and behaviour. The IIRP complements the Faculty of Health Sciences, which seeks to integrate social and natural science research with population outcomes, societal application, and policy analysis. The IIRP also plays a key role in the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences which has identified health and public policy as a priority research area. Each year, the IIRP identifies a key area of research that is supported through seminars devoted to directed readings, public lectures, and an annual conference. Annual conferences bring together local, national and international scholars, activists, and practitioners from a number of disciplines and areas of research to consider conceptual and practical issues related to the institute's research mandate. Conferences provide opportunities for discussion and debate, the development of intellectual networks and collaborative partnerships, and the chance to produce new and original research. As we have grown, the Institute has moved to the forefront of intersectional scholarship in Canada, and is now able to provide opportunities to collaborate with other organizations, Centres, and Institutes at SFU and beyond who are developing intersectionality as a framework for health and social research and policy. The IIRP was formally known as the Institute for Critical Studies in Gender & Health but changed its name in 2011 to better reflect the current debates, methods, and perspectives within the field of health and social research and policy, and to support emerging opportunities for collaboration across Canada and internationally.

The International Cyber Crime Research Centre, a joint venture of Simon Fraser University, the Province of BC, and the International Society for the Policing of Cyberspace (POLCYB), a BC-based non-profit organization established to prevent and combat crimes on the Internet, opened at the Surrey Campus of Simon Fraser University in the summer of 2008. Significant core funding was provided by the Government of British Columbia. The ICCRC is a focal point for collaboration among cyber crime researchers from universities, government agencies, NGOs and private sector organizations. The Centre brings together SFU faculty researchers, researchers from other Canadian and international universities, relevant government agencies, and private sector organizations to address issues related to countering criminal activity within cyberspace; projects are concerned with economic crime, pornography, child exploitation, and terrorism among other issues. The Centre also conducts research into Internet economic crimes such as Warez groups, social networking-related crimes and analysis of ongoing trends. The Centre is currently developing virus scanner-like tools to detect child exploitation images. Cyber crime is a huge and mostly unreported problem, with child pornography and identity theft as the most serious issues. Even when reported, there are significant law enforcement and prosecutorial problems principally because of the global nature of the phenomenon.

The SFU-JLU Joint Centre for Bioarchaeological Research (JCBR) provides a platform for faculty, scholars and students from both Simon Fraser University (SFU) and Jilin University (JLU) of China to join forces to advance bioarchaeological studies in Canada and in China.

The SFU-JLU Joint Centre for Bioarchaeological Research at SFU (JCBR) functions in coordination with its partner, the JLU-SFU Joint Laboratory for Bioarchaeological Research (JLBR) at JLU.

The research centre breeds an opportunity to deepen the long-term partnership between Simon Fraser University and the university overseas, to create a place for both Canadian and Chinese students to gain international research experience in both countries, and to enhance human osteoarchaeological research in Chinese archaeology as a whole through well-designed research projects and hands-on training. This is consistent with the new SFU international engagement strategy for developing deep and mutually beneficial relationships.

The University of Northern British Columbia, the University of Winnipeg, the University of Regina, McGill University, McMaster University, Saint Mary's University and Western University. The TRIUMF facility is based on a 520MeV cyclotron capable of producing multiple proton beams simultaneously, each at a different energy level. TRIUMF has developed a world-class facility called ISAC, which produces beams of unstable rare isotopes. Scientific research at TRIUMF includes medium energy nuclear and particle physics, astrophysics, condensed matter studies, Nuclear Medicine and radiochemistry for the production of radiopharmaceuticals. Applied research includes the design of small cyclotrons, microchips, controls software and medical applications such as the use of proton beams and radioisotopes for cancer therapy.

Subject: Research Centres and Institutes

1.0 Purpose:

The purpose of this policy is to define Research Centres and Research Institutes, the intended scope of their activities, and their required governance and reporting structures.

2.0 Definitions

Research Centres are non-departmental academic or administrative units established for the purposes of facilitating collaborative research mainly within a Faculty.

Research Institutes are created to facilitate collaborative multi-disciplinary research between different Faculties and/or multi-university initiatives and to provide research-related services to the community.

SCUP is the Senate Committee on University Priorities, the academic body responsible for overseeing Research Centres and Institutes on behalf of Senate.

3.0 Policy:

3.1 The purposes of Research Centres and Research Institutes encompass, but are not limited to facilitating collaborative research, especially multi-disciplinary research, and facilitating multi-university initiatives.

3.2 Each Research Centre and Research Institute is subject to all applicable University policies.

3.3 A Research Centre or a Research Institute is entitled to identify itself as a part of Simon Fraser University and to use the University's name and address in the conduct of its activities.

3.4 These rights are granted at the discretion of Senate for fixed, renewable terms.

3.5 Governance and Reporting

3.5.1 The Director of a Research Centre reports to a Faculty Dean, who is responsible for overseeing its governance and budgetary accounts. A list of all Research Centres under the authority of a Dean appears in Appendix I.

3.5.2 The responsible Dean, acting in consultation as appropriate with other university administrators, shall review each Research Centre's activities annually including its financial management and compliance with university policies, and shall report the results of that review to the Research Centre's Director and to the Vice President, Research by August 31 of each year.

3.5.3 The Director of an SFU-based Research Institute reports to the Vice President, Research. The Vice President, Research shall be responsible for overseeing all Research Institutes in which Simon Fraser University participates as a part of a multi-university consortium. The activities of Research Institutes shall be reviewed directly by the Vice President, Research. A list of all Research Institutes with a University-wide mandate appears in Appendix II.

3.5.4 The Vice President, Research shall deliver to the Senate Committee on University Priorities (SCUP) by October 31 of each year a summary report dealing with the activities of all Research Centres and Research Institutes during the preceding year. SCUP shall forward this report for information to the Senate and to the Board of Governors.

3.6 Establishing, Reviewing and Discontinuing Research Centres and Research Institutes

3.6.1 With the application for the establishment of a Research Centre or Institute, a Constitution must be submitted that specifies the following:

- a. a statement of its special purpose;
- b. a provision for the appointment of a Director;
- c. a statement recognizing the obligation to conduct its activities in accordance with University policies; and
- d. a statement of its internal governing procedure.
- e. For Research Centres, the application must be approved by the appropriate Faculty Dean.

3.6.2 Applications shall be submitted to the Vice President, Research, who will forward supported applications to Senate (through SCUP) for approval.

3.6.3 Research Centres and Research Institutes will normally be established for a term of 5 years.

3.6.4 Renewal will be upon application via the Dean and the Vice President, Research, to SCUP, and will be contingent on past performance, financial sustainability, and its continuing purpose.

3.6.5 In considering applications for renewal, the accomplishments of Research Centres and Research Institutes will be measured against their stated initial goals and plans. Specifically, the impact must be demonstrated of a Research Centre or Institute in enhancing research over and above what would have been accomplished by individual faculty members.

3.6.6 The Dean(s) of the Faculties involved and the Vice President, Research will comment on the report and recommend renewal or termination. The proposal will then be forwarded to SCUP, which will vote on the renewal application and report its decision to Senate.

3.6.7 The Vice President, Research may recommend to the President termination prior to the end of the term of a Research Centre or Institute. In such cases, the Director shall have an opportunity to appeal the recommendation before the President makes a final decision.

3.7 Rights and Obligations of Research Centres and Research Institutes

3.7.1 Acting under the authority of its Director, and subject to section 3.4.1c, Research Centres and Research Institutes have the right to:

- a. use the University's name, address, and symbols in connection with its activities;
- b. solicit external grants and contracts in the University's name;
- c. request the maintenance of university budgetary accounts and reports;
- d. use the assistance of Human Resources in hiring employees;
- e. direct the duties of its employees; and
- f. apply for university support.

3.7.2 The Director of a Research Centre and Research Institute has the obligation to:

- a. approve all contracts to be undertaken by or on behalf of the Research Centre and Research Institute, and further obtain the approval of the responsible Dean and the Vice President, Research for any contract;
- b. submit a written report to the responsible Dean or Vice President, Research on the units' activities, including all contractual obligations entered into by or on behalf of the unit, once annually for the twelve months ending March 31 of each year, by no later than June 30 of each year;
- c. submit an annual financial statement showing revenues and expenditures for the twelve months ending March 31 of each year, by no later than June 30 of each year.
- d. Normally, the Director is not entitled to teaching relief or financial compensation.

3.8 Membership

3.8.1 The Director of a Research Centre or an SFU-based Research Institute normally must be a continuing faculty member of the University.

3.8.2 Faculty, graduate students, and research associates are eligible for membership in Research Centres and Research Institutes.

4.0 Scope:

4.1 This policy encompasses all Research Centres, Research Institutes, and similar organizations at Simon Fraser University that are not parts of established administrative units.

5.0 Authority:

This Policy is administered under the authority of the Vice President, Research.
