CURRICULUM REVISIONS

POLITICAL SCIENCE

p. 184 ADD New Course

POL. 213-3 Research Methods in Political Science

This course is designed to introduce the student to the application of qualitative research techniques to political data. The course will focus on the logic of empirical enquiry, the nature and types of political data that are available, and the major techniques employed by political scientists to analyse data.

(Lecture/Tutorial)

Prerequisites: One of POL. 100, POL. 151, POL. 211 or POL. 231.

See Appendix A.

p. 185 DELETE POL. 314-3 Empirical Theory

RATIONALE: POL. 213-3 will provide a basic introduction to methodological and analytical skills for Political Science majors. It has essentially the same content as POL. 314-3, which it replaces, in order that this material may be covered at an earlier and more useful stage in the student's career.

p. 184 POL. 231-3

CHANGE OF TITLE

FROM: Introduction to Comparative Politics

TO: Introduction to Comparative Government and Politics

CHANGE OF PRE-REQUISITES

FROM: Students with credit for PSA. 342-5 may not take this course for further credit.

TO: Students with credit for POL. 131-3 may not take this course for further credit.

RATIONALE: With the dropping of POL. 131-3: Introduction to Comparative Government, a considerable proportion of the material covered in the dropped course has been added to the material covered in POL. 231-3: Introduction to Comparative Politics. The instructors who have been teaching POL. 131-3 recently are the same instructors who will be responsible for making these changes to POL. 231-3. The P.S.A. course has not been offered since 1975 and this notation can now be removed.

The combination of the contents of POL. 434-3 and POL. 437-3 results in the following changes.

CHANGE OF TITLE,
DESCRIPTION, AND PREREQUISITES

POL. 434-3 Constitutionalism, Canadian and Comparative

The major constitutional systems of the world and their main institutions and processes (with special attention to constitutional review and the courts). [Comparisons with the Canadian federal constitutional system will be constant.]

(Seminar)

Prerequisites: Students may not register in an Upper-Division course in any given field unless they have completed a Lower-Division course in that field.

Students who have taken POL. 437-3 or POL. 434-3 under its former title, Comparative Constitutions, may not take this course for further credit.

DELETE

POL. 437-3 Comparative Judicial Systems

See Appendix B.

ADD

New Course

POL. 482-3 Political Leadership and Elites

A study of the social background, attitudes and behaviour of political leaders and elites in selected societies. The social origins of leaders and elites, their rise to power, practice in office and political philosophies will be discussed. (Seminar)

Prerequisites: Any Lower-Division Canadian or Comparative Politics course (POL. 121, 221, 222 or 231).

RATIONALE:

The course has appeared under the selected topics rubric as Canadian Political Biography and Political Elites, but is offered on a regular basis. Giving the course its own number will more accurately reflect its permanent status and free the selected topics number for its intended purpose. The course is being proposed in a more general form ("Political Leadership") to make possible the consideration of a wider variety of forms of leadership.

POL. 482-3

Comparative Political Elites

Course Focus

The course will be devoted to the study of political leadership in industrial and industrializing societies. It will focus on leadership collectivities, i.e., elites, on the national level in political systems outside of Canada. That is to say, "community power" studies, the analysis of leaders as individuals, and studies of Canadian elites will not be of central concern, except when conceptual and methodological questions encountered in such studies are pertinent to the examination of "foreign national leadership collectivities."

It should be noted that the term "political elites" in the context of this course is not confined to the designation "professional politicians" or "governmental decision-makers". The course will be concerned rather with "elites in politics" and therefore will include the study of leadership collectivities whose primary activity and power base are not in the politico-governmental sphere proper (e.g. business elites, military elites, scientific elites, etc.).

Prerequisite

Any Political Science lower division course in Comparative Government and Politics (POL. 131, POL. 231, formerly PSA. 222, PSA. 342, or an equivalent introductory comparative course). Students are urged to consult with the instructor if they have any questions regarding the adequacy of their preparation.

Readings (Core books available for student purchase - those marked with an asterisk* - and/or on library reserve.)

* James H. Meisel (ed.), Pareto and Mosca (1965).

B. The literature on elites is voluminous and constantly growing. The most comprehensive bibliographic compilation is Carl Beck and J. Thomas McKechnie, Political Elites: A Selected Computerized Bibliography (1968)-HM I41 C923. A bibliographic survey of the more recent literature from which students can selectively draw will be forthcoming in class. The very brief listing below are some representative elite studies by "world of development" which constitute a starting point for research (periodical literature has been omitted, with a few exceptions)
