RATIONALE FOR INTRODUCTION OF THIS COURSE

This course adapts a popular undergraduate course that was offered in Political Science since 2016 to accommodate the transfer of Professor Fourt into the Urban Studies Program as her home department. As part of the agreement to transfer teaching and home department from POL to URB, a commitment was made to link POL 463 with an URB graduate and undergraduate course. This is the undergraduate version of the course that will be offered cross-listed with POL 463. At least 10 students would take the POL 463 section of this course, which is why we estimate 5 students in URB 463. This course would also be cross listed with URB 663, and run as a split graduate - undergraduate seminar. The course will expand URB undergraduate offerings which currently offer elective courses to SFU undergraduates. Urban Studies is currently expanding their offer of undergraduate courses, and this course would compliment URB 413 and URB 423 which are enroute to final approval in the SFU calendar.

RATIONALE FOR INTRODUCTION OF THIS COURSE

With the formation of the new Department of World Languages and Literatures from the merger of the World Literature Program and the Language Training Institute in January 2020, work began to better intertwine our curricula. With the addition of this course, which will always be cross-listed with offerings that are national-literature oriented (such as JAPN 360 or ITAL 360 -previously submitted), we add a linguistically-specific offering to our WL curriculum, which has been until now exclusively cross-cultural. This course, which explicitly foregrounds national literature texts in translation, can be taken by students pursuing a WL major or minor, but will also serve as an elective for students who wish to complete culture-specific Minors (such as Italian) or Certificates (such as Japanese —currently under construction). By cross listing, we can make more efficient use of our limited faculty resources as well as ensure more robust enrollments in the course.
